$5,300 FOUND IN HOME OF AGED RECLUSE

Story of How Woman Lived For Years In Squalor Unfolded In Probate Court.

REMOVED TO HOSPITAL

Mansfielder, 78, Discovered Ill, Undernourished While Money Lies In Desk.

The story of how an aged Mansfield woman lived for years in apparent poverty and squalor in the midst of moderate riches had been unfolded today in county probate court.

Found ill and undernourished in her small home at 285 East Second street where she had hidden more than $5,300, Mrs. Minerva Ryland, 78, was in Eleanor Thomas hospital today, to benefit probably for the first time in years from her small fortune estimated at $9,000.

County humane officers uncovered the tragic story after neighbors reported that Mrs. Ryland, who lived alone, had been hurt in a fall in her home.

Removed For Treatment.

Finding conditions of almost indescribable squalor in the tiny home, the officers took Mrs. Ryland to the hospital for treatment and then began the search that revealed the money she had hidden.

The $5,300, all in cash, was not very well concealed, the humane officers said. Most of it was found in a pasteboard box in an old desk. A tip from a relative led to the search. Officers searched the house thoroughly until they were convinced they had found all of the savings.

Guardian Named.

The case came into probate court when social workers asked that a guardian be appointed to handle the aged woman's financial matters. The court named Atty. L. H. Beam as the guardian.

In addition to the $5,300 found in her room, Mrs. Ryland owns two properties in Mansfield valued at more than $3,600, the court learned.

The aged woman has a step-son, a grand niece and a grand nephew in Mansfield, but none of them had been closely associated with her, the judge was told. She also has a brother in Colorado.

Hobbyists To Get Chance To Display Exhibits At Stores

Hobbyists of Mansfield and surrounding territory will have an opportunity to display their favorite hobbies in downtown store windows during the week of Sept. 25, when the Buckeye Hobby club and the Retail Merchants association sponsor an exhibition, it was announced today.

Registration for a display space must be made by Wednesday evening, Sept. 20, with Donald Cram at the Y. M. C. A. All those who want to exhibit their hobby collections must register and specify the approximate amount of space that will be needed.

Ribbons will be awarded winners and judges will be members of the Marion Hobby club. There will be three classifications of ribbons—superior, good, and honorable mention.

Displays will be made by members of the Buckeye club as well as other hobby enthusiasts of the community.

Mansfielders have a widely diversified array of collections which have been displayed at various times and the best of these are expected to be registered for the coming event.

Censorship Controls Flow of War News

(By Associated Press)

Censorship of news is effective in nearly all European countries. It is especially thorough in Great Britain, France and Germany.

So far the chief apparent hindrance imposed by censorship has been disruption of normal communications, but it is obvious that censors seek to prevent the sending of unfavorable news from their respective countries.

Some news dispatches are transmitted in ten or fifteen minutes; others are delayed for hours and some doubtless are suppressed by the censorship.

Lindbergh Pleads for Isolation; Stimson Backs Arms Ban Repeal

No Reason for U. S. to Enter War, Flier Says

Supporters of Present Neutrality Law See Noted Airman Aid Cause; Butler Throws Support to Repeal Drive.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The debate on how the United States is to stay out of war quickened today.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Henry L. Stimson, President Hoover's secretary of state, and Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, had added their voices to it.

Lindbergh addressed the listeners of the radio networks of the National Broadcasting company, the Columbia Broadcasting system, and the Mutual Broadcasting system—an audience of a size usually enjoyed only by the president.

Stimson and Butler expressed their views in letters to the editor of the New York Times.

Lindbergh's plea was for isolation in Europe's present struggle. He saw no circumstance, beyond that of evident self interest, in which America would be justified in undertaking a foreign war. He said nothing concerning the neutrality law—which congress is meeting next week to reconsider—whose proponents believe will keep America out of war and whose opponents believe is unneutral and could involve America in war.

But his speech seemed more nearly related to that of Sen. William H. Borah Thursday night in opening the neutrality debate. Borah pleaded for isolation and opposed repeal of the neutrality law and its mandatory embargo on arms, ammunition and implements of war. Lindbergh asked only for isolation and because he did the proponents of the present law thought his speech would aid their cause.

Both Urge Repeal.

Stimson and Butler both asked for repeal of the arms embargo, maintaining that it was unneutral and that it also placed America on the side of Nazi Germany in the present war.

Lindbergh's father, the late Charles A. Lindbergh, was a representative from Minnesota when America entered the World war. He sacrificed his political career to vote against it. His son's advocacy of isolation was no less uncompromising.

LINDBERGH:

"The great war ended before our full force reached the field," the son said last night. "We escaped with the loss of relatively few soldiers. We measured our dead in thousands; Europe measured hers in millions. . . . A generation has passed since the armistice of 1918, but even in America we are still paying for our part in that victory—and we will continue to pay for another generation. European countries were both unable and unwilling to pay their debts to us.

"Now that war has broken out again, we in America have a decision to make on which the destiny of our nation depends. We must decide whether or not we intend to become forever involved in this age old struggle between the nations of Europe. Let us not delude ourselves. If we enter the quarrels of Europe during war, we must stay in them in time of peace as well.

"It is madness to send our soldiers to be killed as we did in the last war if we turn the course of peace over to the

Ashbrook To Fight For Strict Neutrality At Special Session

William A. Ashbrook, Johnstown, veteran congressman from the 17th district, will go to the nation's capital next week with the determination that America must not, under any circumstances, take any part in a European war.

"I'm for whatever brand of neutrality that is most likely to keep us out of war and to keep our boys at home," he told The News-Journal yesterday. "And unless some unforseen circumstances arise, I shall work to retain the present brand, which in my opinion is the only strict neutrality. Any deviation from it is a deviation from strict neutrality, and this is one of the things on which we can't compromise. It's either Big Business or American lives."

He said the argument is being advanced that our present neu-

Mansfielder Tells of Hearing S. O. S. of Torpedoed Athenia

Although Charles McKinley, jr., 33 Sherman avenue, was in Glasgow, Scotland, when that city evacuated its children early this month, and was on a freighter only 80 miles from the torpedoed Athenia and heard the frantic S. O. S. of the stricken ship, his two-month vacation in England this summer was not completely overshadowed by the war.

McKinley returned to Mansfield yesterday after the British freighter Cairnross had docked at Montreal early this week. He went to England in June for a bicycle tour of England, Scotland and the Channel Islands.

The freighter was 10 and one-half days in crossing and had left Scotland a day or so before war was declared but after Danzig had been taken by the Germans. The trip was tense for

Don't Forget Munich--It Was Then That Poland's Fate Was Forged, Craige Says

Crushing of Czechs Was Event Spelling Doom for Gallant Poles.

By CAPTAIN JOHN HOUSTON CRAIGE,
(U. S. Marine Corps Retired)
(Written expressly for International News Service)

NEW YORK—Now that the gallant Polish army is reeling, punch-drunk, ready for the knock-out, it might not be a bad idea to remember that the blow that softened up the Poles for the kill was not handed out by the Nazis in the two short weeks the war has lasted. It was forged, framed and delivered at Munich, with the full approval of England and France, one fine September morn just two weeks less than a year ago.

It was the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia that spelled the doom of Poland. The republic of the Czechs was the keystone of the arch of resistance to the Germans in south-east Europe.

Why the French and the English agreed to its destruction is one of the enigmas of all time. Once it was handed over to Hitler, the possibility of holding back the Nazis flood from the Danube was gone.

If the English and French were going to fight the Germans, they should have fought when they had the state of the Czechs and Slovaks as an ally. This little mountain republic in central Europe would have made a world of difference in the military situation on the eastern front. Here is why:

The Czechoslovakia state extended from the Rumanian border nearly seven hundred miles, into the heart of Germany. The Germany of 1937 looked like a

Mansfield, Akron Meet Today With Mercury Near 100.

With the temperature near the 100-degree mark, Mansfield high school's Tygers inaugurated their 1939 football season against Akron West at Stadium field at 2:30 p. m. today under the most adverse weather conditions any game has been staged on the home gridiron in years.

Despite the heat, a crowd of at least 4,000 was anticipated for the lid lifter which marked Paul Snyder's debut as head football coach. Grade school children in the city were the guests of the Tygers at today's game.

Madison township high school was defeated by a heavy Wooster eleven, 25 to 13, in the Rams' opener last night, while Massillon, the Tygers' opponent next week, dedicated its new stadium before 15,000 by trouncing Cleveland Cathedral Latin, 40 to 13.

COOLER, AT LAST

Weatherman Promises Relief Tonight, More Sunday.

Cooler weather was definitely on the way today to bring relief from the searing four-day heat which broke all September records.

Mostly cloudy and somewhat cooler weather was forecast for tonight for the Mansfield area with generally fair and cooler promised for Sunday.

The temperature in Mansfield yesterday tied the year's high of 96 degrees, but the mercury last night dropped to 63, four degrees lower than the preceding night.

A light breeze today provided some relief and the noon temperature was 92, two degrees lower than it was at the same time yesterday. Because of the heat, Galion schools were closed yesterday afternoon and Mansfield schools were dismissed an hour early.

Agree To Cease Hostilities On Mongol Border

Armistice Viewed As Step Leading To Non-Aggression Pact; Agreement Seen Pleasing To Hitler Reported To Be Urging Russo-Jap Friendship.

(By United Press)

TOKYO—Japan and Russia have declared a truce on the Manchukuo-Outer Mongolia frontier and have agreed to appoint a commission to delimit the boundary, it was announced today.

It was agreed that Japanese and Russian troops should remain in the positions they occupied as of 1 p. m. Friday.

(Early this month Japanese reported that a considerable force of Russians was on the Manchukuo side of the frontier. There had been no indication in the last few days of troop positions.)

The foreign office this afternoon made public an agreement with Russia providing:

1. For cessation of hostilities at 2 a. m. Moscow time today.
2. For troops to remain in their positions as of 1 p. m. yesterday.
3. For representatives of Japan and Russia to supervise control of the border situation to see that there was no more informal fighting and to see that the troops remained in their positions.
4. For exchange of prisoners taken in the fighting which had continued since mid-May.

5. For creation of a commission of two Russian and Outer Mongolian delegates and two Japanese and Manchukuan delegates to decide on a fixed boundary between Manchukuo and Outer Mongolia.

A reference to return of relations to a "normal state" was taken in diplomatic quarters to indicate that reports of a Japanese-Russian non-aggression pact were premature.

However, it was understood that under the agreement to maintain troops in their positions as of yesterday afternoon, Japanese and Russian delegates might discuss not only the troop position and the boundary but other and broader differences.

Japan initiated the negotiations which led to a settlement of the border bickering, it was understood.

Russia Names New Ambassador to Tokyo.

MOSCOW —(INS)— Solidification of Russo-Japanese relationship following declaration of an armistice on the outer Mongolian-Manchukuoan border moved a step further today with appointment of M. K. A. Smetanin as new Soviet ambassador to Tokyo.

Smetanin has been functioning as charge d'affaires in the Japanese capital. His appointment as ambassador was regarded as strengthening the possibility of an early non-aggression pact between the two eastern powers.

Unofficial but usually reliable sources said that the Premier and Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov would soon resume conversations with the Japanese envoy, M. Togo, regarding the non-aggression pact.

German diplomacy was feverishly active in this direction. It was believed that the question of Soviet aid to China was at present the main obstacle in the path of a Russo-Japanese understanding, since the Soviets were loathe to forsake the Chinese in the far eastern theater of war and diplomacy.

Speculation as to whether the Soviet and Japanese government might follow this step with a non-aggression treaty was especially keen in view of the tremendous effects such an agreement might have upon the course of the present European war.

Indicating that a permanent Japanese-Soviet understanding has been reached, the Soviet government later today was reported to have appointed Charge D'Affaires Smetenin as ambassador to Tokyo.

The moment the agreement was announced, word spread through Moscow that a comprehensive Soviet-Japanese understanding is imminent.

Informed quarters in Moscow believed the promised "understanding" would prove to be largely similar to the recently concluded Soviet-German non-agrespact. Authoritative quarters here said the present Soviet-Japanese agreement was the "result" of the Moscow-Berlin accord.

It was known that Chancellor Hitler, ever since the Sovet-German pact was concluded, has been urging Japan and Russia to come to an understanding.

The armistice was revealed in

WEST: French, British Troops Prepare Major Offensive Drive

(By International News Service)

PARIS—The army of France, 100 per cent successful thus far in cleaning out advance German positions before the Siegfried line, took up positions today believed to foreshadow a major offensive at almost any time.

The strict secrecy maintained by the high command made any prediction as to the actual start of the offensive impossible, but all indications pointed to an opening of full joint Anglo-French hostilities along the entire western front before many hours or days have passed.

Official communique No. 25, issued by the war office this morning, laid great emphasis on the repulse of a strong enemy counter-attack with artillery in the lower valley of the Nied river near Sierk, just south of the Luxembourg frontier, indicating that the main Allied push may come in that sector.

For once the French communi-

EAST: Nazis Claim Capture Of Two More Cities, 8,000 Poles

(By United Press)

BERLIN—The army high command announced today that German troops had occupied Prezemysl, 60 miles west of Lemberg, the chief city of southeast Poland, and that 8,000 prisoners and 126 guns had been captured in the Warsaw area.

An earlier communique had announced the capture of Bialystok, 100 miles northeast of Warsaw had said that a battle was in progress near Lemberg.

The occupation of Prezemysl apparently had been carried out by the main body of the German southern army. Polish sources had reported the main German force concentrated near that city, with tank and truck units operating far ahead of it in an effort to cut off Polish retreat to Rumania.

It was announced that Polish divisions surrounded near Kutno, 60 miles west of Warsaw, were still resisting.

First pictures and stories sent here from the Warsaw region, which the Poles still held, pur-police dog's head with the mouth wide open. Czechoslovakia was like a bone wedged far down the dog's throat.

Railroads ran from Poland and Rumania into the republic of the Czechs. The Rumanian railroads connected up with those of Soviet Russia. Poland, Rumania and Czechoslovakia were designed at the conference table at Versailles to be mutually complementary to one another. The three, with Yugoslavia, were expected to be able to fight on even terms with the Germans on the eastern front, should the Nazis ever try for world-dominion.

Worst news of the day is the report from Moscow that Japan and Russia have come to an agreement to call off their war in Mongolia. Tass, the official Soviet news agency, in making the announcement, hints that negotiations between the two nations are proceeding and that there may be more to tell shortly.

The possibility of Japanese-Russian agreement to divide the Orient is one of the nightmares from which the democracies are suffering, result of the German-Russian pact, as outlined in this column on Tuesday. Today's announcement may seem insignificant, but this reporter would hazard a bet that historians of the future will find it one of the most significant happenings of the eventful year of 1939.

If the Russian bear and Japan's little brown men do get together, occidental nations' trade with China will be out the window, the open door will be slammed and foreign investments in China will be written on ice. And when China has been split between the two, what will become of the British and Dutch East Indies, the Malay states, India and Australia?

'BAT MAN'S' JUMP FROM PLANE CLIMAXES THRILL CIRCUS SUNDAY

A civil engineer for the city of Pittsburgh who takes a three-month vacation every year for a "thrill," will perform his "plunge to death" tomorrow afternoon at the fairground in the climax to a "Thrill Circus" sponsored by Delano lodge.

Capt. Gary Garrison, known as the "Bat Man," will make his leap from an airplane as an altitude of 10,000 feet, using only a pair of huge bat wings to glide to safely.

Leaping from planes is nothing new for Garrison, for he has made over 3,500 parachute jumps in the past 22 years. At present he is the holder of a record of 25 consecutive chute jumps made in 12 consecutive hours, a feat he performed in Ridgeway, Pa., in 1935.

Although he uses only the huge bat wings to glide to safety, he relates that his nearest approach to death came while he was serving with the 118th observation balloon squadron in France during the World war.

In his second parachute jump, a German pilot followed him to the ground spraying him with machine gun fire, he said. When Garrison recovered in a field hospital several hours later he discovered that there were 72 bullet holes in his chute and five in his body. He still carries one of the bullets in his back today.

The former air corps reserve officer who joined the service at 15 by giving his age as 18, is married and lives in Pittsburgh with his wife and children.

LINDBERGH IN ISOLATION PLEA

Noted Flier Sees No Reason For U. S. to Enter War; Lift Arms Ban, Stimson Says.

greed, the fear, and the intrigue of European nations. We must either keep out of European wars entirely or stay in European affairs permanently.

"In making our decision, this point should be clear: These wars in Europe are not wars in which our civilization is defending itself against some Asiatic intruder. Ther is no Genghis Klan or Xerxes marching against our western nations. There is not a question of banding together to defend the white race against foreign invasion. This is simply one more of those age old quarrels within our own family of nations—a quarrel arising from the errors of the last war—from the failures of the victors of that war to follow a consistent policy either of fairness or of force."

Allowed Nazis To Grow.

He said the arbitrary boundaries established by the Versailles treaty either had to be revised or England and France had to keep Germany weak by force. They did neither and "as a result, another war has begun, a war which is likely to be far more prostrating than the last, a war which will again kill off the best youth of Europe, a war which may even lead to the end of our western civilization.

"We must not permit our sentiment, our pity, or our personal feelings of sympathy, to obscure the issue, to effect our children's lives," he continued. "We must be as impersonal as a surgeon with his knife. Let us make no mistake about the cost of entering this war. If we take part successfully, we must throw the resources of our entire nation into the conflict. Munitions alone will not be enough. We can not count on victory merely by shipping abroad several thousand airplane and cannon. We are likely to lose a million men, possibly several million—the best of American youth. We will be staggering under the burden of recovery during the rest of our lives.

And our children will be fortunate if they see the end in their lives, even if, by some unlikely chance, we do not pass on another Polish corridor to them. Democracy itself may not survive. If we enter fighting for democracy abroad, we may end by losing it at home."

He urged his listeners not to be misguided by foreign propaganda that our frontiers extend to Europe. They had to but look at a map to see an ocean on each side. If the frontiers are extended to Europe, "we might as well extend them around the earth. An ocean is a formidable barrier, even for modern aircraft."

America's safety "lies in our own internal strength, in the character of the American people and of American institutions. As lond as we maintain an army, a navy, and an air force worthy of the name, as long as America does not decay within, we need fear no invasion of this country."

Warns of Propaganda.

Americans will be deluged with propaganda, he said. They must learn "to look behind every article we read and every speech we hear. We must not only inquire about the writer and the speaker—about his personal interests and his nationality—but we must ask who owns and who influences the newspaper, the news picture, and the radio station.

"The gift of civilized life must be carried on," he concluded." It is more important that the sympathies, the friendships, the desires of any single generation. This is the test before America now. This is the challenge—to carry on western civilization."

STIMSON

Stimson assured the editor of the Times that he did not differ with Borah in desiring to spare America "the agonies" of war. But whereas Borah thought that repeal of the arms embargo would drag America into war, "I think that the repeal of those provisions constitute perhaps the last remaining hope of our avoiding being so dragged in." Because the law exists, he believed that the danger of America becoming involved was greater.

BUTLER

"The present miscalled neutrality act," the educator said, "puts us into this war on the side of the aggressor. Repeal it and go back to that neutrality which international law defines and controls and we shall be on sound ground. . . . Let us keep out of military participation in this war, by all means; but let us not be so stupid as not to see what the war is about or how directly it affects our own interests as Americans."

Police Threaten To Halt Pre-Grid Game 'Pep-Rallies'

BATES WARNS AGAINST MORE DISTURBANCES

Show at Theater Halted, Other Damage Done; Beer Gives Student Body Warning.

Police Chief Meade K. Bates today had flatly warned high school officials that a repetition by students of the incidents that marked Thursday night's "pep rally" and snake dance preceding the opening of the high school football season would bring sharp police action.

The incidents, according to Bates and police officers who were called to the scene, included creating a disturbance at the Ritz theater, damaging door stops in the theater, tearing down display signs and pelting the theater building with fruit.

Sol Bernstein, theater manager, said the youths—about 200 in number—had created such a disturbance that it had been necessary to stop the show and turn on the house lights.

The students had left the Ritz theater, according to Capt. John Miller and Officer Eugene Hartnett, by the time they arrived. Locating them later, Hartnett said admonitions to the youths to behave themselves were entirely disregarded and that they sought to gain entrance to other downtown theaters, took billiard balls from downtown pool rooms and persisted in creating a disturbance.

Jesse Beer, Senior High principal, said he had issued a reprimand to the entire student body at assembly exercises yesterday and threatened to forbid "pep rallies" in the future unless he was assured they would be properly supervised.

The rally Thursday night started with a program arranged by the Junior Association of Commerce at the Columbia Tire field on Bowman street, but the J. A. C. had no connection with the downtown demonstration.

Beer said that after the assembly, a number of students had turned over to him the "souvenirs" they had taken from downtown business places. He said he would ask police to return them to their rightful owners.

Chief Bates said he had no objections to students giving vent to enthusiasm so long as they did not interfere with the rights of others and did not damage property.

He asserted, however, that another such demonstration as the one this week would resudt in police taking whatever steps were necessary to restore order.

U. S. Lines Up Six Plants Here For War Production

Six Mansfield industrial plants had been lined up today by the federal government as potential producers of military goods in the event the nation should become involved in war.

The Mansfield plants, which were not named, are among 846 in the state which the government is counting on to produce guns, ammunition and other war needs in the event of an emergency.

The potential producers were lined up by federal investigators who listed 10,340 firms throughout the nation which would be used under the country's vast industrial mobilization plan.

Eight plants in Galion, four in Ashland, three in Bucyrus and six in Marion also are on the government's list of emergency producers of supplies.

The War department has detailed descriptions of all the plants and would be ready on short notice to begin production of supplies, reports from Washington said.

The department is attempting to distribute the producing centers over the entire state and nation.

Submit $243,000 Work Relief Program

Up and Down THE STREET

A lot of hitch-hikers probably would give anything for Deputy County Auditor Arthur S. Beck's formula for getting unsolicited rides. Beck hikes to work every morning from his home in Woodland just for the exercise, but so many of his friends asked him to ride on Lexington avenue that he had to change his route. When the weather gets bad, he thinks he'll go back to the old route again, and he hopes those same friends won't have forgotten by then.

Pity the poor football player who had to don a heavy uniform and other equipment for today's game with mercury flirting near the 100 mark. For today's game with Akron West at Stadium field, Harry Mehock, athletic director of Mansfield schools estimates each Tyger carried 15 pounds of equipment into the game, the lightest equipment available. And to think that spectators with a minimum of wearing apparel complained of the heat, Harry said.

Mansfielders voting for contestants in the Major Bowes amateur program next Thursday when he presents his salute to Mansfield will call a new exchange number. The telephone company today had set up 35 additional trunk lines for a corps of workers who will tabulate the votes. All the lines will be connected to Main 9900, LeRoy Wittemire, general manager of the company, said.

While Mansfielders at the airport today baked in a temperature of 96 in the shade—only they were in the sun—a pilot and air photographer stood around in fleece-lined clothes and arctics. The two were flying under federal contract making aerial maps of Ohio. Yesterday they took pictures of Crawford and Morrow counties and today they are photographing the terrain of Richland county. They flew at an altitude of 14,000 yesterday where they said the temperature was 28—five degrees below freezing.

BAER TO LEAD DEM CAMPAIGN

Central Committee Chairman To Head Fall Drive With Wolfe as Assistant.

Gustave A. Baer, veteran Mansfield political figure and chairman of the Richland County Democratic Central committee today headed the Democratic fall campaign.

Baer, who directed the county drive for votes last year, was selected by the party's candidates at a meeting in the office of Mayor Claude M. Hunter last night.

With the withdrawal by John C. O'Donnell, executive committee chairman, from an active part in the campaign because of business, County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe, was named to assist Baer in the campaign management.

As their first step towards financing the drive in the forthcoming municipal election, the candidates re-appointed the finance committee for last year's campaign. This group includes Wolfe, chairman; City Auditor Paul L. Kelley, E. B. Kallmerten, Baer, John Correll, and Atty. Freehafer.

A campaign headquarters for party workers will be selected by the campaign committee within the next two weeks.

COUNTY HEADS PROUD OF ROAD JOB, CELEBRATE WITH FISH FRY

The county's new 50-miles-an-hour secondary roads were given the once over Friday afternoon by county officials who liked them so well that they celebrated with a fish-fry at Mifflin lake afterwards.

In an 80-mile tour of the county, the three commissioners and County Engineer Howard Sword rode on most of the roads that were improved in a $70,000 PWA project, just completed, and proved that motorists can travel them comfortably at 50 miles an hour.

Under the project, first PWA road job in the county, 70 miles of secondary routes were surface-treated with stone and asphalt and about 18 miles were resurfaced with bituminous materials.

Described as "economy roads" by the county engineer, the surface treating was done at an average cost of $270 per mile while the 18 miles of resurfacing cost about $2,600 a mile.

The Mansfield Asphalt Paving company, contractor on the project, used 19,000 tons of stone and 324,000 gallons of asphalt mixture on the job which required the greater part of the summer to complete.

Most of the county's 18 townships shared in the resurfacing and surface-treating work, but the majority of the work was done north of Mansfield. The roads range in width from 10 to 20 feet, averaging about 14 feet.

After completing their tour early in the evening, Commissioners C. L. Mitchell, Guy Stewart and Ray Hout, Engineer Sword, and about 30 other county officials and guests attended a fish-fry at Stewart's cabin on Mifflin lake.

Also at the party were representatives of the Mansfield Asphalt Paving company, headed by Carl H. Stander, president; officials of the county road department, PWA engineers and representatives of the firms from which the road materials were purchased.

CITY, COUNTY DRAFT PLANS FOR NEXT YEAR

Estimates on 6 Major Projects Sent to District WPA Heads at Columbus.

Mansfield and Richland county today submitted to district WPA offices at Columbus potential work-relief programs totaling $243,000 for 1940.

Acting on the request of WPA officials, the city and county drafted estimates of six major project which are expected to be started next year.

The city's program calls for:

1. A $75,000 street improvement program including the construction of curbs, gutters and sidewalks.

2. Construction of additional sanitary and storm sewer lines costing a total of $65,000.

3. A water development program totaling $35,000 for extensions in the distribution system.

Of the total cost of the proposed program the city's share has been figured at $62,000, or approximately 30 per cent of the expenditure.

County Plans 7 Projects.

Although the county commissioners submitted estimates on seven proposed projects, only three of them, all calling for construction of bridges, are considered major jobs.

The largest calls for a $15,000 county bridge program for rural sections, while the others involve the expenditure of $12,000 for construction of the Bowman street and $8,000 for the North Main street bridges, both in the city limits.

The county has been seeking to have the two bridge projects in the city included in the county WPA program for several months.

The city's street improvement program is expected to include the paving of several streets, constituting the 1940 street program, and the continuation of the sidewalk construction and curb and gutter repair projects.

Of the sewer improvement projects, $45,000 is planned for storm sewers and $20,000 for sanitary sewer extensions.

Mayor Claude M. Hunter explained today that the proposals were only tentative and may be subject to extensive revisions before actually started.

In addition to the bridge projects, the county also included in its estimates a $9,000 road grading project, a $6,000 proposal for drainage ditches, $2,500 for a sewing project and $500 for a household aid project.

Not That It Matters

War Censorship Gives a Taste of Press Control Some Think They'd Like

—By JANE WILLIAMS

THOSE few people who have been advocating a "controlled press" are getting a swell dose of it right now in the war news from Europe. You can read every American paper from cover to cover for every line of war news—and you still don't know anything about it. This, too, despite the fact that the most extensive line-up of crack correspondents is in the danger zones, working like mad, to supply you with news.

Regardless of their ability to get the news and get it straight, they can send you only what the various governments want them to. So that when you put it all together, the front page of any newspaper gives you the impression that all of the correspondents have been playing hide-and-seek with the war news and a bottle of Scotch.

FOR more than a week news coming out of Germany reported the fall of Warsaw, while the news from France, England and Poland, just as staunchly denied it. France and England say they have indented the Siegfried line; Germany scoffs at it. Germany says she's brought down a number of English war planes; England says she hasn't.

Hitler says he'll bomb open cities when the civilian population takes unto itself the status of soldiers; England says her airmen will retaliate by bombing German cities; Chamberlain says they won't. England says the Athenia was bombed by a German sub, and Germany vehemently denies it and places the blame on either England or the munition makers who want war.

Add it all together and you have such conflicting news that readers wonder sometimes if a war actually is going on.

The greatest disadvantage of a "controlled press" is that propaganda takes the place of news.

ONE of the most pertinent criticisms of "The Rains Came" was that the picture failed to bring to the screen Bromfield's brilliant treatise on social and economic background of India. Quite true—but if the picture had incorporated all that, you and I would still be sitting in the Ohio or Madison watching the premiere. A background that covers a couple thousand years can't be adequately covered in an hour and a half.

CAME a letter this week from the Head of The Williams Clan who has been fishing in Northern Ontario for the past two weeks—and catching them too, I bet—saying that the Canadians are pretty irritated because we aren't taking a hand in the war immediately. The women at the camp were particularly frank about it.

"It's just as much the duty of the United States as it is ours to take part in this war," they told him.

And the H.O.T.W.C., who has about as much tact as Senator Borah, answered mildly:

"But we're still holding the bag on the last war."

WHILE it seems impossible to get authentic news out of any of the European countries, the most portentous bit of news this week was carried in one paragraph. It said that Hitler is asking for the return to Germany of Jews who have "skilled and technical knowledge," offering to return their fortunes and positions as a bait.

If this is true, it is indeed ominous news from Germany. Only desperation could drive the Reichsfuehrer to bargain with the Jews, to beg them to return and lend their brains to the German cause.

And on the other hand, the gesture itself seems so childishly futile—like asking Niagara Falls to run backward.

THE management and patrons of the Ritz theater were plenty burned over the conduct of the Senior High school students who invaded the theater Thursday night during the "celebration" of the opening of the football season. The show had to be stopped while they yelled, used profane language, tore down signs and broke off door stops, according to people in the theater.

Then when the police were called, they raided a nearby fruit store, took the fruit and bombarded the front of the theater with it.

All in the name of sportsmanship!

People are so sick of this sort of hoodlumism in Mansfield. And since neither parents nor police have any control over this sort of "fun," it behooves school authorities to do something about it. It seems to me that if the school authorities curtailed the football schedule, or took some other possible method of reprimand, it would definitely put a curb on school hoodlums.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Roosevelts's Declaration About Canada Puts a New Light on Monroe Doctrine

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—Now that the Americans know what the Monroe Doctrine lets them in for, they may want to affirm, trim or revoke it. Hitherto, to the present citizenship of the country, the doctrine has been pretty much of a wall motto, but in the clutch created by Hitler's world war, it comes to mean that the United States guarantees Canada's territorial integrity against not only Hitler but Hitlerism, even though Canada is, in a legalistic sense, the aggressor, having declared war on an unoffending European ruler who was virtually going about his patriotic duty of defending his people from the foul aggression of the bumptious Poles.

If President Roosevelt correctly interprets the doctrine in saying that the United States would not stand idly by if domination of Canadian soil is threatened, the United States, without being actively aware of the fact, has a commitment, not to Canada but to herself, to go to war on Canada's behalf in certain easily conceivable conditions.

The doctrine has been interpreted in the past to permit foreign powers to attack and defeat American nations and dependencies of other foreign nations on this hemisphere. The catch is that such foreign powers, having attacked and chastised an American land in redress of real or imaginary wrongs, must not extend its sovereignty or system of government.

A realist would decide that the best way to prevent such extension would be to make sure that no European power—and, in the present instance, Germany—won such a fight on this hemisphere. The president seems to be a realist.

The Monroe Doctrine, there, obviously, is an important problem in the general question of neutrality, and, inasmuch as it has never been formally adopted by congress or approved by the people except in a passive way, it calls for definite understanding and positive decision now.

An attack by Hitler on the least coral speck owned by Britain or France in the proscribed zone would call for the same action, nor is it worth arguing that, once committed to hostilities by such mischance, the United States could then escape complete participation on the side of the Allies.

Maybe that is what the American people understand and accept, but they never had a chance to express themselves on the subject, and the possibilities are too important for decision on the basis of a policy expressed in a much different state of the world more than 100 years ago in a presidential message which never was adopted as law.

The neutrality fight arrays the pro-ally element against the isolationists.

The pro-Ally group argue that their kind of neutrality is the true neutrality, but they not only detest Hitler and want him licked, but fear that if Britain were to fall this country would be next on the list and would be pushed around and finally drawn into a war, anyway.

The other neutrality, the existing kind, if affirmed, would be a terrible blow to the morale and the material resources of the Allies and might beat them.

So we just can't be neutral in fact. Whatever choice we make we help one side or the other, and whatever congress may do about it the Monroe Doctrine, as it stands, will still oblige the Americans to come a-running the instant Hitler makes a pass at anything British or French anywhere on the American patrol.

County Heads For Record With Only 2 Typhoid Cases

Increased sanitary regulations in force throughout the county have practically wiped out typhoid fever in Richland county this year, Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city county health commissioner said today.

Only two cases of the disease have been reported in the county in 1939 as compared with seven each in 1937 and 1938 while the epidemic in 1936 resulted in 175 cases.

Not since the epidemic which claimed the lives of several persons has a single death from the disease occurred, Dr. Rehder said.

With the year more than two-thirds over the commissioner believes the county stands a "good chance" of setting the best health record in 10 years as far as typhoid fever is concerned.

He credited the enactment of a city plumbing code and recent changes in the county regulations as well as more rigid inspection of milk and water supplies with eliminating possible sources of typhoid carriers.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1939.

Drive carefully tomorrow—and resolve, while sober, not to drive after drinking.

Some folks appear quite unappreciative of a few days of uncomfortably warm September weather.

The kind of war for Americans to fight is one against idleness, disease, intolerance, ignorance and want—with plenty of opportunities for volunteers.

Varying Views On Neutral Course

UPPERMOST in thought of millions of Americans, as congress is called into special session next Thursday to consider amending the Neutrality Act, is what course the United States should pursue in maintaining a position of neutrality, so as to avoid being drawn into the European war.

Sentiment of the American people has been strongly expressed in favor of non-participation and of a neutral national attitude—but there is no agreement as to procedure in accomplishing this end.

Able spokesmen have presented various phases of the issues involved—each contending that HIS formula gives best assurance of keeping the United States free from foreign entanglements.

Outstanding opponent of repeal of the arms embargo is Senator Borah, who regards the proposed "cash and carry" amendment as making dangerous approach to intervention in behalf of Great Britain and France.

President Roosevelt has given expression to opposing views and favors amending the Neutrality Act so as to give all belligerents access to American-made munitions and other war supplies, provided they pay cash and use their own ships for conveyance.

Each contends that proposals of the other are "un-neutral," as the one position is interpreted as aiding Great Britain and France, while the present embargo appears to benefit Germany.

The position of Congressman William A. Ashbrook, as expressed while in Mansfield yesterday, is consistently in favor of pursuing a course most likely to keep the United States out of war, thus preventing the need of again sending American boys to European battlefields.

Just what form contemplated changes in the Neutrality Act will take, as congress resumes discussion of this subject, is not yet clear, and Mr. Ashbrook is reserving decision until he has had full opportunity to study various proposals being made ready to present to congress next week, and thereafter until action is taken.

Meanwhile Congressman Ashbrook is anxious to have expression of views from his constituents in this district. He will be at his home in Johnstown during the early part of next week and can afterward be addressed, "House Office Building, Washington, D. C."

Despite wars and rumors of wars, it is gratifying to note that Bellville and Loudonville go along placidly holding excellent street fairs year after year.

Risk Essential to Progress

PHILIP A. BENSON, president of the American Bankers association, recently observed that one essential of recovery is to encourage "private capital to engage in new ventures and the extension of existing industries. 'Risk' capital flourishes in an atmosphere of confidence, not where hostility exists. It will venture if there is an expectation of a profit and when its right to seek a profit is recognized."

There is not enough general recognition of the fact that "risk" capital, at the beginning, is usually the only capital which is willing to take a chance on some venture that may produce a great new employing industry of the future. Certainly that truth is well illustrated in the immediate past.

The automobile, the radio, the telephone, the airplane—they are all commonplace today, but not many years ago they were widely regarded as fantastic dreams. They could not attract conservative capital looking for gilt-edge investments. Without "risk" capital which was willing to take a long chance in the hope of substantial profit they could never have been developed far beyond the curiosity stage—and the millions of jobs, the gigantic wealth, and the untold opportunities they created would never have existed.

When you drive "risk" capital into hiding, you virtually make industrial progress impossible.

A Milwaukee woman boasts that she was able to stop playing bingo—but such will power is probably quite uncommon.

Thoughts Turn to Football

THIS is the time of year when America's fancy turns to football.

Starting today and continuing until late in November, the U. S. athletic stage will be dominated by this popular fall sport, except for a brief period next month when the annual major league baseball classic appears on the scene.

Mansfield's chief interest this year is again centered in the gridiron representatives of the high school, who parade their wares for the first time today under the guidance of a new coach, Paul Snyder, late of Mt. Vernon.

Snyder succeeds J. Russell Murphy, who resigned to assume a coaching position at Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y., and the new mentor has already established his popularity in this city.

The new Tyger coach realizes the herculean task that confronts him in his attempt to build a record comparable to his predecessor's, but he appears capably equipped to carry on from where the veteran Murphy left off.

Mansfield grid prospects this season are problematical, but, win or lose, the team's followers are solidly behind Snyder, his assistants, Vern Hoffman and Harry Mehock, a leftover of the old regime, and the Tygers.

The News-Journal takes this opportunity to wish the Tygers and their advisors a successful season.

Things will be better when majorities are given protection against obstreperous minorities.

Lively Death Valley

DEATH VALLEY, formerly known as a grim and dangerous desert waste, has become a popular winter resort with health and recreation facilities. More than 60,000 visitors stopped over in the valley or passed comfortably through it last season. There are now fine motor roads, luxurious hotels and artificial swimming pools.

Death Valley Scotty first lived there and proved that the snake-infested region was habitable for others as well as for himself and the snakes.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — Military strategists here say Italy stayed out of the war because Germany asked her to—for these reasons:

1. Through Italy's Po River valley and the Brenner Pass, France and England would have a route into German Austria. With Italy neutral, this road is closed.

2. With Italy as an active ally, Germany might have to send a large Germany army into Italy to protect the Po River route.

3. As a neutral, Italy can be a source of supply to Germany—for a time at least.

Italy also could give valid reasons for staying out. Italy would go into the war only for what she could get out of it. And win or lose, she could not get out of it all she would have to put into it.

On the Spot.

FIRST off, Italy would become one of the first battlegrounds of the war. A French army would certainly sweep down the Alps toward the Po Valley. It is a hard place for Italy to defend. The rich industrial section of north Italy would be the objective of the French and British bombing planes from the first hours of the war. Italian planes, in return, would have a much longer route to reach French industrial centers for retaliation.

Italy would be besieged at sea as well, and on that front Germany could offer her no aid, as Germany's fleet would be bottled up in the Baltic by a small portion of the British fleet. The rest would be available to take Italy's surface fleet out of play early in the war, although her submarines would continue to be a serious menace.

Almost at once, Italy might lose her North African colonies, because with the British fleet likely in control in the Mediterranean she could not send reinforcements. Rich Libya might fall to French and British forces attacking on both sides. Ethiopia, cut off from all directions, might again be ruled by Haile Selassie.

Just how rich a source of supply Italy turns out to be depends in large part on how strict the British choose to make their blockade—and that probably will be strict enough if they follow World war patterns.

In those days England put all Germany's neighbors on strict rations. For a time it was rich business for Holland, Norway, Denmark and Sweden to buy large quantities of lard, wheat, coffee, steel and other war essentials and ship them on into Germany at war prices. Then came the British rationing. England allowed these neighbor countries to import only the amount they needed for themselves. All else was diverted to England.

Which Way?

IT WAS strictly illegal in the light of international law. And it would be strictly illegal to cut Italy off from the same business. But certainly England won't change her plans in that respect. Italy could still be of some aid, but not very much. She has almost no raw material resources of her own.

Further, it is generally suspected here that Italy, as in the last war, will stay out until it is pretty definiely decided which side has the best chances.

France and England undoubtedly will put the heat on Italy to make her decide, without too much delay, which way she is going to jump. There is no place for an important neutral in the middle of a mess like a European war.

ANOTHER TRAFFIC HAZARD

European Diplomats Keeping Busy

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — England and France may not appear so busy fighting, but they are working hard in the diplomatic corridors.

Just now that is of especial interest both to diplomats, who like to win contests that way, and to military men, who are in doubt how England and France can win any other way.

Wedged in among reports of skirmishes on the western front and German advances in the east, are brief items telling how England and France are using all their old persuaders on Italy, Spain and Japan, to turn them against their one-time ally of the anti-comintern. Nor have the British given up on Russia.

Wars are sometimes won by an adept purchase of an ally just as they are won by an adept purchase of munitions. England no doubt would offer Italy an extensive piece of African acreage in return for fighting Germany or even for an assured friendly neutrality.

With Italy on the fence as she is, England would not feel safe in sending any sizable expedition through the Mediterranean into the Black sea to help Poland through the "back door."

The Time Has Come.

MILITARY experts suggest that the time has come for diplomacy to work relief. Search as we will, we cannot find a solitary soldier who can tell how France or England can break into Germany. An attack on the sea coast would be extremely hazardous and might cost Britain half her navy and still fail.

The skirmishing along the western front so far means little.

The nearer the collapse of Poland, the more desperate the plight of France and England to show that they have the winning hand. With Italy on their side, they would have an opening into Germany. The Brenner pass does not furnish an especially happy access to Germany but it is better than using half a million to a million men blowing a hole through the 40-mile Siegfried line.

So urgent is the need for such an entry that the British and French ambassadors have camped on Count Ciano's doorstep ever since the war began.

What of Russia?

WHERE Russia stands may remain a mystery until her troops cross somebody's border. Just now there are a few in Washington—and in Russia, seemingly—who are in doubt as to what is up.

A few desperate "Hitler-haters" tried to read into it that the Russians never had been happy with Germany as a next door neighbor and would be even unhappier with Germany closer to the rich Russian Ukraine (their Ohio-Mississippi valley) that she ever was before.

Of course if worst comes to worst for the Allies, they can sit tight and hope to starve out Germany. But sea-strategists say a goodly crop of barnacles will grow on the bottom of the British navy before the Allies succeed.

Timely Editorial

The Flag Is Still There.

It was 125 years ago that the words of "The Star Spangled Banner" were written by Francis Scott Key. The tune to which the patriotic anthem is sung with more or less difficulty by people generally was composed in 1798 by John Stafford Smith, an English organist. He called the melody "Anacreon In Heaven." Anacreon was an ancient Ionian Greek poet.

The lines of the poem were written by Key while he was detained aboard a British ship in Chesapeake Bay while Fort McHenry was bombarded. It speaks of the "rockets' red glare and bombs bursting in air." So, many have declared the national anthem is too militaristic. Others plead that whatever tune is used should be by an American composer and singable. However congress is supposed to have ended that discussion March 3, 1931, by declaring it the nation's patriotic hymn.—Toledo Blade.

Listen, World!

Hands Off . . . High Explosives!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

IT'S BEASTLY, the way we poke our snoots into other lives, nosing, nuzzling, like hogs rooting for truffles.

Those aren't pretty words. I wish they were even less pretty, perhaps they might shock some of us into a realization of our abominable acts. For it is abominable to invade another's privacy . . . and the nearer and dearer that other is, the less right we have to violate his spiritual seclusion.

In the preface of his "Green Bay Tree" Louis Bromfield said: "Every one of us is different from the others. There are no two in the least alike and no one ever really knows any one else. There is always a part which remains secret and hidden, concealed in the deepest part of the soul. No husband ever knows his wife and no wife ever really knows her husband. There is always something just beyond that remains aloof and untouched, mysterious and undiscoverable, because we ourselves do not know just what it is. Sometimes it is shameful. Sometimes it is too fine, too precious, ever to reveal. It is quite beyond revelation even if we chose to reveal it."

"SOMETHING . . . THAT REMAINS ALOOF . . . MYSTERIOUS." You recognize that "something" in your own life. You are aware of strange processes, outreachings and withdrawings, which influence your life tremendously, but which even you cannot understand.

There are times when you do not wish to talk . . . or even be observed . . . times when you hide yourself as frantically from observation as any savage in his cave. There are memories you cannot share . . . shames you cannot expose . . . gropings you dare not reveal.

And you are gentle toward those things in yourself. You turn away from the memory of those heart-breaking losses, those humiliating blunders. You walk lightly over the "sleeping dogs" which must not wake.

BUT HOW GENTLE ARE YOU TO THE OTHER FELLOW'S HIDDEN MEMORIES . . . HOW CONSIDERATE ARE YOU OF HIS SECRET FEARS AND DREAMS AND SHAMES?

How much do you respect his right to privacy, particularly if he is of your own family?

Think! Think back to that letter you opened and read . . . that confidence you revealed . . . that meditative mood you violated with your chatter! And yet you wonder at your child's defiance of you . . . your husband's or wife's suspicion . . . the general coldness which greets you wherever you go!

"But it's silly to emphasize trifles like that," you may say. "When people live close together, they simply can't keep things from each other."

Why can't they? Simply because they don't want to. As a matter of fact, blood kin have exactly as much right to privacy—and far more need—than utter strangers. The closer we are, the more we need a protective barrier between our secret selves . . . a "Hands Off — High Explosive" sign. And you wreck the very foundations of friendliness if you transgress that sign.

Our greatest charm, during courtship days, is our mutual mystery. Yet our first act, after marriage, is to defy and destroy that mystery. One of the cruelest tortures of prisons and concentration camps is the lack of privacy. Never can the tortured victim escape the constant scrutiny of his guards. Men go mad under that scrutiny . . . prefer death, itself, to that hideous and interminable prying.

MATES SEEK DIVORCE COURTS . . . CHILDREN RUN AWAY . . . FOR THE SAME REASON.

Everyday Poem

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

This Is My World.

This is my world—the sunset sky,
The soft new dawn, a night
Of glistening rain that silvers where
It meets a shining light.

This is my world—a sky of stars,
Or moon; the books I love,
And music, pictures, poetry,
That lift me up above

All else. There is, I know a world
Quite different from this,
But it could vanish and naught that
It holds would my heart miss.

Summary of Week's Happenings

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

AN EXTRAORDINARY occasion," President Roosevelt proclaimed Wednesday, "requires the congress of the United States to convene in extra session at the capitol in the city of Washington on Thursday, the 21st day of September."

The occasion, as all knew, was war abroad. And the sole business of the extra session, if Mr. Roosevelt had his way, would be to overhaul the machinery for keeping America out. The present neutrality law, written in 1937, provides that the president, when he finds a state of war to exist, shall prohibit the sale of U. S. arms to belligerents.

Upcoming: A Battle.

Unsuccessfully, the administration sought repeal of the embargo last summer, and substitution of a provision permitting sales of war materials at any time to any country, provided the purchaser takes title to the goods here and carries them away in his own ships.

Opponents of the present law says it favors Germany by cutting off the Allies from supplies which, because Britain controls the seas, Germany couldn't get anyway. But to repeal it now, its backers say, would be taking sides with Britain against Germany—and Americans would wind up in Allied trenches as in 1917.

Some congressmen who opposed neutrality revision in August now say they are for it. But North Dakota's Senator Gerald P. Nye, who wrote much of the present law, this week promised revisionists "a real war in the legislative field." And Utah's isolationist lion, Senator Borah, roared, "No compromise!"

'National Emergency.'

Previously, to cushion America against shocks, Mr. Roosevelt had:

1. Proclaimed U. S. neutrality;
2. Invoked the arms embargo against belligerents, including Canada;
3. Declared a limited state of "national emergency," in which he ordered an increase in the U. S. armed forces and took steps to get stranded Americans home from Europe;
4. Issued a reorganization order, under the authority congress gave him last April, streamlining the White House staff and providing, "in the event of a national emergency," for "such office for emergency management as the president shall determine";
5. Moved to stem undue price rises by suspending the sugar marketing quota and promising action against profiteers.

For housewives were complaining that, despite known surpluses, they had to pay 5 to 20% more than before the war for things like flour, lard and pork chops.

Farmers and Brokers.

Despite new estimates of bumper crops this week, other commodity prices, though still below AAA "parity" goals, had climbed to the level where farmers could pay off government crop loans, regain the collateral and sell at a profit.

Wall Street, too, was mostly bullish, though prices swung erratically. And business generally was buoyed up by expectations of (1) higher wartime prices, (2) reductions in such imports as textiles, and (3) possible conversion of some branches of heavy industry to war-goods production.

Airplane factories were reported hearing for absolute maximum production. Chemical makers saw a sellers' market. Steel employment picked up with a rush of domestic orders. Railroads recalled workers from furlough. The $20,000,000,000 coal industry, which hadn't shown a profit as a whole in 15 years, felt it had cause for a brighter outlook.

Abroad

Short or Long.

The first World war ran four years, three months and 14 days from Austria's declaration of hostilities against Serbia on July 28, 1914, to "cease firing" at 11 a. m., Nov. 11, 1918.

On the 10th day of Germany's invasion of Poland, last weekend, Nazi Field Marshal Goering predicted: "We can hope that 14 days after the beginning of this fight it will practically be ended. The last cleansing will have been accomplished in less than four weeks. . . . We want nothing from the French."

And newsmen recalled this paragraph from British Ambassador Henderson's account of his interview with Goering's boss just a week before the shooting started:

"The fuehrer declared that the German-Polish problem must be solved and will be solved. He is, however, prepared and determined after the solution of this problem to approach England once more with a large and comprehensive offer."

But Hitler's hope for a lightning peace bumped against an announcement that Britain was basing its policy on the assumption that the war would last three years or more.

Belligerent Neighbor.

Canada joined mother Britain, last Sunday, in war against the Reich, bringing to 505,556,000 the total allied populations aligned against 90,600,000 Germans and Slovaks. Her role, it was indicated, would be to guard British and French possessions in the north Atlantic and supply her allies with food, war materials and, perhaps, aviators.

At Home

Michigan Miss.

To Atlantic City, N. J., each September, go lithe lassies from many states and cities to contest for the title of Miss America. Most who have won it say they'd just as soon forget the whole thing now. But 42 more danced, recited Shakespeare and paraded in bathing suits for this year's judges. The winner: Patricia Mary Donnelly, of Detroit. She's 5-foot-7, weighs 126 pounds, has brown hair and likes chili con carne.

Speed Limit Up.

Aeronautical wiseacres have contended for years that airplanes never would go faster than sound, 475 miles an hour. At that speed, they said, friction heat would make the air heavy, like a liquid, and the "shockwave" would tear a plane to pieces. Now government scientists at Langley Field, Va., have developed a new wing which, they say, the U. S. will use on 500-m.p.h. planes.

Philadelphia Story.

Philadelphia dectectives attribute "between 50 and 100" deaths to a murder-for-money syndicate that, they say, collected "hundreds of thousands" in life insurance on its victims. Trials began this week of two accused ringleaders: Paul Petrillo, 45, a tailor, indicted for six slayings; and Cesare Valenti, 55, an ex-convict, who, the prosecutor said, got cash in advance for planting poison in a man's breakfast.

QUOTES

Earl Browder, secretary of the U. S. Communist party: "The preconditions have been created for a successful democratic revolution of the German people, which alone can remove the threat of fascism from Europe and the world."

Lord Hugh Cecil, brother of Viscount Cecil, British peace advocate: "It is not desirable, especially in wartime, to encourage individuals . . . to think too much about their own safety. Everyone should be encouraged to say, 'After all, it does not matter if I am killed'."

Gen. John J. Pershing, on his 79th birthday: "It is not a very good time to be celebrating birthdays . . ."

People

Home Again.

Britain's Edward VIII abdicated Dec. 10, 1936, and sailed for France two mornings later to marry "the woman I love," Baltimore-born Wallis Warfield Simpson. "It may," he said then, "be some time before I return to my native land." It turned out to be two years and 10 months, to a day.

As the Duke of Windsor, 45, he landed at Portsmouth last Tuesday night, bringing his duchess and, the London press said, "qualities which can be of high service to his country's cause at this hour."

Long and Short of It.

First British officer to reach France in 1914 was Capt. Edmund Ironside, who went over to organize rail transportation. Among the first again, Sir Edmund, 59, is inspector-general of the British overseas forces that began crossing the channel last week.

Gen. Ironside, 6-foot-4, weighs 252 pounds. His conferee, "somewhere in France," is tiny, "map-crazy" Maurice Gamelin, who is credited with the strategy that stopped Germany at the Marne 25 years ago this month. Gen. Gamelin, French generalissimo of the Allied armies, will be 67 next Wednesday.

Science

Why Mothers Die.

For every 1,000 babies born in the U. S., more than 50 die in infancy, and between four and five mothers die in childbirth or from complications associated with it. To tackle the situation behind those statistics, 3,000 doctors, nurses and public health workers went to Cleveland this week for the first American congress of obstetrics and gynecology. The meeting, its chairman hoped, might lead to a 10% reduction in such deaths.

A fourth of the 10,600 maternal deaths last year were due to abortions, reported Dr. Elizabeth C. Tandy, U. S. children's bureau statistician.

Lum Off Ice.

Cancer is a disorderly cell growth that, unless checked, may spread through the body and cause death. To check that growth, doctors now are experimenting with packing patients in ice to slow down bodily processes.

This week, after five days in such "frozen sleep," Jack Lum, 53-year-old Chinese, was back at work in his Springfield, Ill., restaurant—feeling "awfully much better." Further treatment of his cancer with X-rays, doctors said, would determine whether they'd put Lum back on ice.

In Short

Resigned: Sir Herbert Marler, Canadian minister to the U. S.

Elected: Fadjo Cravens, Democrat, to succeed his father as Arkansas congressman.

Arrested: In Dublin, two accused ringleaders of the IRA campaign of terrorism against Britain.

Won: The international lifeboat race, by the crew of the U. S. tanker W. C. Teagle.

Died: Lawrence Gilman, music critic; Chris C. Smith, motorboat builder; Robert W. Edgren, sports writer; Judge Marion de Vries, ex-California congressman; Eliodoro Villazon, ex-president of Bolivia; Henry C. Cowles, botanist.

SOCIETY & CLUBS

EXCITING AFFAIRS ON SOCIAL SCHEDULE

Late Summer, Early Autumn Witnesses Parade of Club Beginnings; Patriotic Organization Plans Session at Country Club.

By FRANCES E. GENSLEY

WRITING about club and social activities goes in a series of exciting circles—June is weddings, September beginning of school and scholastic activities, October marks the opening of the club season, the winter months are heavily sprinkled with holidays, and the arrival of spring brings with it the ending of meetings, while summer is always prominent for picnics and reunions. So it is from month to month there is always a new circle of events just being launched or just ending.

Looking Over the Week's Calendar.

Now, as you know, in spite of the unseasonable weather, we are facing the start of another Mansfield club season. The past few days have witnessed first sessions of the Federation of Women, the A. A. U. W. and the Business and Professional Women's club in addition to many smaller organizations.

Church programs have been resumed both in a secular and social sense, and about all we have to do here is listen to the happy news of events to come.

Planned affairs next week are comparatively light, but announcements of other things which will be features of late autumn and early winter provide ample ammunition for the society department's typewriters. Let's take a look at next week.

Monday.

Seeing there was no event—either social or nuptial—set for Sunday we'll hop into the first day of the week, and see what's coming.

Outstanding program in patriotic circles will be the meeting at Westbrook Country club for members of the Mary Washington chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Dr. Stewart W. McClelland of the Lincoln Memorial university will be the guest speaker. At this time chapter members will bring books to present to Dr. McClelland for library at the university.

Members of the Jared Mansfield chapter of Mansfield, and officers of the Sarah Copus chapter at Ashland and the Olantangy chapter at Galion have also been invited to attend.

And a P. S. to members. Bring along your sales tax stamps that you've been saving all summer. The chapter officers want to turn them in for rebate.

Aside from the Business Girls Bible club meeting at the home of the Misses Eleanor and Mildred Johns Monday evening, all the other sessions for Monday so far scheduled are of church groups. Mrs. R. H. Wadsworth will be hostess to the Grace guild, and members of the Katherine Aberle Missionary society will have a steak roast for their husbands and friends at the home of Mrs. Carl E. Horchler, jr.

"In His Steps" is the title of the book which Mrs. J. R. Turner, dramatic reader and book reviewer, will give at the meeting of the Central Methodist guild at Mrs. Virt A. Simpson's home in South Boulevards.

Tuesday.

If this warm weather continues through Tuesday members of the Alpha Pi Sigma sorority may eat cold wieners instead of hot dogs at the roast they are holding at the Devil's Punch Bowl. Committee members include Mrs. Ralph Andregg, Miss Lucille Antrican, Mrs. Raymond Beal and Miss Phyllis Brown.

Strictly business might be the sign posted for the C. L. of C. session at the club rooms, and purely social could be the contrasting notice for the Delano auxiliary when the members have a program including a presentation of a play, and a "county fair" with Mrs. Bessie Ricks in charge. However the group will meet for business promptly at 7 o'clock, before the regular session.

Mrs. Candace Smith, Mrs. Doris Borden, Mrs. Beula Baker, Mrs. Pauline Frontz and Mrs. Anna Barcroft will be the hostesses for the meeting of the Star of Hope class at the church parlors on Tuesday. There will be a cry of "double and redouble" at the American Legion home during the afternoon while members of the Bridge club bid and play their cards.

Picnic season over? Oh, surely not! At any rate the Friendly Eight club members are certain it's not for they're having a family affair at North Lake park, and the Class '36 of the First Christian church has planned a wiener roast.

Two social groups are the Merrymacs and the Meet-Em-All Bridge club, both of which have planned sessions, and this final bit of news will interest many A. A. U. W. members. For on Tuesday evening Miss Margaret DeWitt, 199 Helen avenue, will be hostess for the first Current Problems group meeting. This study group is open to all university club women.

Wednesday.

Heading the list of mid-week events is the tea in the garden of Mrs. Franklin Bissman's home for members of the Republican Women's Council. Mrs. Catherine Neff Cox, state committee woman from North Canton, will be the guest speaker at the affair which is set from 2 to 4 p. m.

A covered-dish dinner has been planned for members of the St. Luke's Young Women's Missionary society at the church. The Misses Marguerite Koerper and Thelma Bowman are in charge.

There will be a regularly scheduled session of the Women of the Moose, and the May-B and Bide-A-Wee clubs have also set meetings.

Thursday.

Another of the city's clubs will begin the year's program Thursday when the Joan of Arc Study club has a dinner-bridge party at the Mansfield-Leland hotel. The president, Mrs. Verba Kanary, will be hostess. There will be a session of the St. Paul Thursday Nighters with the Misses Louise Aungst, Ruth Bollman, Mary Margaret Hardeen and Anne Pasheilich in charge.

Both the Floral Hedge club and the Tip-Top club have planned regular meetings, and the Druscilla club will picnic at North Lake park. The Women's guild of the First Presbyterian church will also meet in regular session, and Mrs. A. B. Endley, 371 Sherman place, is hostess for the meeting of Circle Four of the First Methodist church.

Friday.

Ending the week's activities will be the meeting of the Town and Country Garden club with Mrs. George Price, the session of the Debonaire club with Miss Louise Bush and the covered-dish guest dinner party of the Sarah E. Lewis Junior club at the Memorial building.

Saturday.

Saturday will witness several marriages in the city. Miss Josephine Henness and John Chatlain will start the nuptial parade at 11:45 a. m. when they meet at the altar of the Central Methodist church. The rice will hardly be scattered from this wedding when Miss Catherine Black and Frank R Gessner exchange vows at the altar of the South Main Street Evangelical church. The same afternoon, at 3.30 o'clock, Miss Yone Winona Hoyle Bartlett and Robert J. Taylor will be married at St. Matthew's Lutheran church. All three weddings will be open church ceremonies.

Although the word is that Westbrook Country club will remain open for service until Oct. 15, the final affair of the social season there will be the dinner-dance Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim H. Brown are the hosts.

Mrs. Abele was in charge of the devotions, and following a short business session, the group played bunco. Mrs. Russell Haman and Mrs. D. C. Cole were the prize winners. Luncheon was served at the close of the games. The place of the Oct. 20 meeting will be announced in the near future.

Hawaiian Theme Used at Party Honoring Kathleen Hawley

Had an uninformed person walked into the recreation room of the Lincoln Insurance company last night he would have thought himself on one of the beaches in Hawaii instead of at a personal shower party honoring Miss Kathleen Hawley for all of the guests were attired in grass skirts and leis. The hostesses, Mrs. Charles Wolford and Mrs. Robert Glessner, made the skirts and leis for the guests in order to carry out a Hawaiian theme.

Miss Hawley had a wreath of real flowers. During the evening, while bridge was being played at six tables, Miss Ruth Maffett, who has spent some time in Hawaii, did several native dances. The decorations, which carried out an orange, brown and green color scheme, were tropical in design, and even the refreshments—which consisted of ukelele-shaped ice cream, and cocoanut cake—carried out the note.

The buffet table was decorated with a mirror replica of a body of water centered with a miniature island complete with grass hut, native girls, surf board and canoe, which had been brought from Hawaii. Mrs. Ethel Hawley, mother of the bride-elect, and Mrs. Fred Kindinger, her aunt, presided at the table.

Later in the evening a Hawaiian doll with a note concealed in her skirt and green and orange balloons containing slips of paper directed the guest of honor to her gifts. The hostesses presented her with a personal gift. Prizes were won by Mrs. Earl Garrison and Mrs. Fred C. Lewis

Miss Hawley will become the bride of Colson Holmes at 10:30 a. m. at the First Lutheran church Sept. 30. Tuesday evening the Misses Ruth Patton, Mary Vesper and Edythe Benson and Mrs. James Stout will entertain for the bride-elect at the Susie Janis home, and Wednesday night the Misses Dorothy Altaffer and Leota Pittinger and Mrs. Thomas Holmes will give a party in her honor.

ASHBROOK TO BE STRICT NEUTRAL

Will Oppose Repeal of Arms Embargo If It Seems to Mean We Go to War.

trality law, with its embargo on all war supplies, favors Germany in effect. On the other hand, the cash-and-carry plan, as favored by the president, he pointed out, is not a neutral stand, for it favors, in effect, Great Britain.

"The fallacy of the cash-and-carry plan," he said, "is that the limited financial resources of the warring countries will be exhausted early in the war and then it will be a credit-and-carry plan. This will send the American manufacturers to the big bankers for loans—and then we will have the World war situation all over again. The bankers will put a lot of money into it, and then in order to protect that money, American boys will be asked to go to Europe to fight. Propaganda will do the rest."

The veteran solon isn't seriously disturbed over the economic phases of a strict isolation plan for America.

"If the present neutrality law is retained," Ashland said, "and we keep an embargo on all materials and supplies that are used to fight a war, there may be some downward reaction here, but if we lift the embargo so that this country may profit from the war in Europe, what will we have when the war is over? Another depression and a period of adjustment. The depression of the last few years has been the direct result of the boom created by the World war."

He favored warning all American citizens and shipping concerns to keep off the high seas or travel at their own risk. This, he said, may be incorporated in the president's proposed neutrality bill.

"In the event that I do not vote for the president's bill—and right now I am sure that I will not—it will not be because of any doubt of the president's sincerity of purpose or ability. But I feel now that no additional powers should be given to the president and that congress should hold all of the power that has been delegated to it. The president can keep congress in session so that in the event of an emergency, it will be there to act."

Ashbrook added that he still favored, as he always had, a war referendum under which this nation could not declare war on any other nation without a vote of the people, except, of course, in case of actual invasion.

Asked if he thought the emergency session of congress would be asked to consider legislation dealing with profiteering, he said he "certainly hoped so."

"I would favor control of prices for the duration of the war in order to keep the profiteers in check. There is no reason why prices in this country should not be kept on a reasonable basis."

Ashbrook was accompanied to Mansfield yesterday by his nephew and secretary, Paul Ashbrook, who will precede the congressman to Washington by several days.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Lillian's comfortable prophecy came true. No message summoning me to Dicky's aid came to the farm during my brief sojourn there. But other events came fast enough to keep us from ennui.

Through the open door we saw Miss Whitlock, in the corridor, look at her wrist watch. A glance at my own showed me that in two minutes more she would enter my father's room and waken him. I stood up and Lillian rose with me.

"There's no hurry," she said. "If she wants us she'll signal us."

"Will you do something for me?" I asked tensely.

I could feel her questioning eyes upon me.

"Of course," she replied promptly. "Name the chore."

"Katie is to bring up Father's hot breakfast exactly five minutes from the time Miss Whitlock goes into the room," I said. "Would you mind going down there now—"

"And checking up on her?" Lillian supplemented, smiling. "No, I don't mind in the least, but I don't think it's necessary. However, I'm already gone. I don't think Miss Whitlock will need either of us to help her, but your father may ask for you. Therefore, you ought to be on hand. I'll be back pronto! I don't yearn to stay around Katie's kitchen when she's on an assignment."

"If Father asks for you, I'll tell him you'll be right back," I said, "and thank you so much!"

"Katie is strictly on the job," Lillian told me. "She will be here on the dot. Any word from the Chief?"

"Not yet," she said, nor was there until Katie and Jim came upstairs, Katie with the tray which I knew she would entrust to no other hands, and Jim bearing an electric toaster and a coffee pot. As if she had been signalled, Miss Whitlock opened the door exactly upon the minute she had named, took the tray from Katie and spoke softly to Lillian and me.

"If you'll bring in those other two things," she said, "we can get busy at once. And—he's distinctly balky."

Her eyebroks quirked up whimsically as she murmured the last words, and I guessed that she needed our assistance in persuading my father to eat. Lillion took the coffee pot and I the toaster, in two movements almost simultaneously, and I gave the accolade for which Katie was palpably waiting.

"Thank you so much, Katie and Jim," I said. "You were on time to the dot, and I know everything is fine. I'll tell you how my father enjoys it, later. You may go back now."

"Tank you," Katie said, and Jim echoed the words. Then they went away, and Lillian and I followed Miss Whitlock into my father's room.

We found him fully clothed and sitting in an armchair. There was a portentous frown upon his face as he watched Miss Whitlock arrange the tray upon a roller-wheeled table, a frown which did not soften as he turned to us.

"Are you responsible for this?" he asked, looking at both Lillian and me. "You know that I have no time for luncheon. I had an abundant breakfast, and Harry ought to be back any minute."

"But there are no signs of him yet," Lillian said smoothly. "I looked down all the approaches to the house just now. I'll tell you what; I'll mount guard outside, and the second I hear him I'll double for that Garcia messenger and rush in here. As long as you don't see me, you might as well eat some luncheon and keep your strength. Besides, if things are shaping up the way you think, you don't know when you'll have a chance to eat again. Madge! I'm depending on you to make him see reason."

Button, Button, Exercise

By MME QUI VIVE

When a woman takes on tonnage the slim waistline of her young days is nothing but a tender memory. If her equator would waste away she would be happier. How come that bulk amidships? Too much grub, not enough exercise. Do we hear protests? We do. The plumpies insist that they eat nothing and work like horses. They'll never be able to make the family doc believe it. They fall off the diet wagon at regular internals and what they consider exercise is nothing more than casual movement.

It takes a pretty swell gown to make a presentable appearance when the figure has expanded. No woman need bear with it. A medical examination may prove that some glandular disturbance is at fault, but in nearly all cases it is a matter of over-indulgence in the good things of the table and enjoyment of a life of leisure.

Wise women who have passed the thirtieth birthday who know that middle age is likely to bring the meal bag shape, do their daily dozen, clip off a brisk walk every day, shake thir fair heads when the cake is going the rounds. They take time by the cowlick and stay slender.

It is possible to reduce with no injury to the health, no great deprivations or hardships. A member of our beauty class reports that she reached the 200-pound mark, throught something should be done. She cut out sugar, cream, butter, white bread and potatoes, took off thirty pounds in three months and felt better for it. She's going to keep on with her diet regulations until she drops to normal weight.

The most important factor of body remodeling is determination, the next is persistance. The trouble is that women are impatient; results don't come quickly enough.

Here is a good exercise: Throw the contents of the button box on the floor. Stand erect, left hand on the hip, legs rigid. Bend at the line of the hip, pick up the buttons one by one. Don't stop until the last button is in the box.

Exercise of the midsection is a general help to the functioning of the inner organs. The muscles of the abdomen and waist are the weakest in the body. We use our arms and legs in the day's activities; they stay strong. The midsection gets little exercise. Standing tall and pulling in the tummy should be a regular habit. That alone will make for slenderness and grace.

FRENCH, BRITISH MAP OFFENSIVE

Allied Troops Take Up Posts For Big Drive Throughout Western Frontier.

que was sufficiently explicit that it was not necesary to read between the lines. It admitted that the preliminary French operations in the no man's land between the Siegfried and Maginot lines have been anything but simple due to heavy German artillery fire.

The French have had to depend upon mobile units almost entirely during the initial phases rather than risk the lives of infantrymen by sending them into the open under a constant rain of fire from Germany's heavy guns.

"It was an active night on numerous parts of the front," the communique said.

"There was very strong enemy artillery action in the region south of Saarbrucken.

"Some advances have been realized by our troops east of the Moselle river.

"A strong enemy counter-attack with artillery has been repulsed in the region neighboring the lower valley of the Nied."

The Nied valley lies 12 miles southeast of Sierk and nine miles north of the German town of Saarlautern.

(Editor's Note: In connection with the fighting south of Saarbruecken, informed sources in London stated that the French were all but ready to announce the fall of this important industrial city of the Saarland into French hands.)

The French tactics followed in the all-important preliminary western front activities can now be described as follows:

First a terrific artillery barrage is laid down by the big guns of the Maginot line, aided by French and British aerial bombardments which serve also as reconnaissance flights.

Tank corps and other mobile units are then sent into the fray, advancing yard by yard under cover of the big guns. Additional units are then brought up on the right and left flanks of each advancing tank corps and the entire area affected covered with a virutal sheet of armed steel before any infantry whatever is sent into action.

When this is achieved, trenches are dug or the French troops posted in pill-boxes or advanced concrete emplacements abandoned by the Germans.

That this has not been achieved without considerable losses is apparent from the constant stream or hospital trains flowing into Paris. The high command will not disclose the actual extent of the casualties and any estimates are sheerest guesswork.

It can be stated on the highest authority that as yet there has been no major offensive. The French do not attempt to overemphasize the present hostilities into anything more than preparation for the big attack that is expected shortly, but the movements thus far have been a none the less important part of the allied military strategy.

The communique indicated that French efforts to widen the mouth of their military pliers and spread the battle front are succeeding.

Each day the French troops, pressing forward with their relentless advance, are gaining more ground along the eastern bank of the Moselle.

At the same time German efforts to split the French flanks—shown by the German counter-attack down the valley of the Nied river between Niedaltdorf and Kemprichbemmersdorf — are failing despite the heaviest possible artillery barrages and despite heavy aerial attacks upon the French lines.

The French advance along the Moselle river through the outposts of the Siegfried line are regarded here as a magnificent military achievement.

But authoritative observers emphasized that the French forces in that sector have nearly 12 miles to cover before they can expand the firing line.

At the same time, favoring the French is the fact that the Germans cannot intensify the fighting much more, according to reliable French sources, unless they withdraw more of their forces from Poland.

Today's communique followed a statement last night which told of the defeat of a German air fleet in a spectacular fight with French and British planes over the western front. It was learned that several important German officers had been captured.

In addition, France claimed a major victory in the advance northeast of Sierck, where it was claimed a German counter-attack was crushed.

British Jail Two as Spies on Dutch Ship.

AMSTERDAM — (U.P.) — British naval authorities arrested two alleged German spies aboard the Holland-American liner Nieuw Amsterdam, while the vessel was in the British contraband control off the Downs, it was disclosed today. The ship arrived in Rotterdam last night.

The British also detained a man, believed to be named Stern, who had claimed to be a Jewish refugee but upon investigation, the British said, proved to be an agent through whom 1,500 tons of copper aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam had been purchased in the United States. The copper was consigned to Dutch firms but was destined eventually for Germany, the British charged.

Thirty-four German stewards and crew members of the Nieuw Amsterdam were interned by the British.

'Enemy Action' Sinks Belgian Ship.

LONDON — (U.P.) —The Belgian passenger liner Alex Van Opstal was sunk late Friday night as a result of enemy action in violation of international law, the ministry of information said officially today.

The Alex Van Opstal, 5,965 tons, the ministry said, was sunk as a result of enemy action off the Shambles lightship near Weymouth. Either the ship was torpedoed or, as its master believes, it was destroyed by a mine explosion. But, the ministry of information said, the British at no time have laid mines anywhere near where the ship sank.

Whether sunk by a torpedo or a mine, the ministry said, the destruction of the Alex Van Opstal was an "enemy violation of international law."

Owners of the British steamship Fanad Head, 5,200 tons, received advice that the ship had been sunk and that its crew had been rescued.

The crews of the torpedoed British steamship Vancouver City and British fishing trawler Davara arrived at Liverpool.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

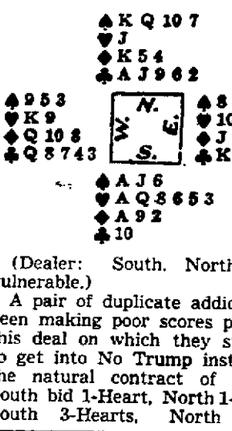
By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

AN ABSURD IDEA

In the world of duplicate bridge the thought seems to be abroad among many fair players that, if you can make game at either a suit or No Trump contract, it is better to play it at No Trump.

Presumably this is because the same number of tricks will count ten more points at No Trump. That part is logical as far as it goes, but suppose the hand is one which naturally should be played in a suit bid. In such a case there may be one more trick at the suit contract than at No Trump, possibly two or three more.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

A pair of duplicate addicts had been making poor scores prior to this deal on which they strained to get into No Trump instead of the natural contract of hearts. South bid 1-Heart, North 1-Spade, South 3-Hearts, North 3-No-Trumps and there it was allowed to stay.

Following a diamond lead, East and West got two tricks in each red suit, holding it to exactly 3-No Trumps.

At other tables the bidding was: South 1-Heart, North 2-Clubs, South 2-Hearts, North 2-Spades, South 3-Hearts, North 4-Clubs and South 4-Hearts, a contract which got made with an overtrick and which counted 50 points more than the best that could be done in No Trump.

JAPS, RUSSIANS SIGN TRUCE IN BORDER SCRAP

Agree to Cease Hostilities On Mongol Frontier; Non-Aggression Pact Looms.

a communique given out by Tass, the official Soviet news agency.

Machinery for a permanent settlement of the long-standing Soviet-Japanese dispute over the outer Mongolian-Manchukuoan border is provided by the agreement, which was reached after four days of talks between Molotov and Togo.

Hostilities that have been raging with few interludes since last May 11 were brought to an end by the armistice. It also promised to end sporadic Soviet-Japanese fighting which has been in progress for some eight years in other border areas.

Announcement of the agreement was made after the Soviets mustered an estimated million men in addition to the armed forces already alert to deal with any exigencies that might arise from the German-Polish hostilities.

While calling up several new classes of reservists, Russia continued to reinforce its western frontier adjoining Poland. Army and navy stations in Moscow and other centers were crowded with young men answering the summons to military service.

It was estimated unofficially that Russia will have about 3,000,000 soldiers under arms.

CHAPTER VI

"Oh, no, of course not. But you're a dear to think of it. No, it's a bad man in the company, and I've told the manager he will have to get out or I shall. But you know, in a big company of important actors they can't fire one of them because another of them asks it."

"No, I suppose not."

"Well, forget it, anyway. I'll promise this. If it ever happens that you can help, I'll let you know."

"Oh, will you! I'll be so glad to help. Come on, we must go back to the house. It's nearly lunch time."

They went back slowly. They found everybody in the livingroom, and a wild discussion was going on. It was soon evident that the subject was the improvement of the village.

"Since I've seen it," Yvette observed, "I feel that it could stand improvement, quite a lot of it. And, too, it would well repay effort. There are really lovely bits, —that is, they could be made lovely,—if I weren't under contract, I'd turn myself into a landscape artist and help you out, Mr. Madison. But I daresay you've enough helpers."

"Enough would-be helpers," Harley said, "but they don't help."

"Ignorant?"

"No; ill-tempered, greedy, jealous, envious, deceitful,—"

"Are they mad at you?" Yvette looked incredulous.

"They are indeed! But what's the use of repining. Where are those cocktails? Aggie, go and tell Wilkins we didn't ask to have them aged in the wood!"

"I know quite a bit about modern architecture and decoration," Anita said; "I am sure I could help you out, Harley."

"My dear girl, I'm overrun with expert designers of all sorts. What I want is a peacemaker, an efficient trouble-ban for real trouble, a calmer-downer of ruction-loving citizens, a settler of stirred-up tempers."

"I'm afraid that's beyond me," Anita said, regretfully, and her host's 'Thank God!' was inaudible, but none the less fervent.

"I don't mind the ingratitude," Madison went on; "one expects that, but it is the injustice and the real basic wickedness of men whom I considered my friends. At first, they were all with me, and ready to take their part and pay their share with what seemed true willingness. Now, for some unacknowledged reason, they are all in a rambunctious, cantankerous, vicious opposition."

"Not all of them, Mr. Madison," said Ames; "some are still loyal to your plans and ideals. But they want to shave the expenses by buying inferior material, and having incompetent workmen, so that the plans, one by one are being ruined."

"That's it," Harley said. "And worse than that, they are underhandedly persuading the various contractors to make their estimates prohibitively high, or in other ways to injure and harm every project planned."

"But this is criminal procedure," said George Lee. "You should get after them legally, Harley."

"Yes, I know all that, but I went into this whole thing as a hobby as something to enjoy. I don't want to make any profit out of it, it is my way of doing something for my fellow townsmen that shall last and grow better with time and care. I intend to endow the thing with a trust fund, to be used as long as it will last, and I assure you that will be a long time."

"That's all right, too, but you mustn't let these thieves and robbers lay you out cold. It's a shocking state of affairs. Just how do you stand now?"

"Well, we've so far been a rather informal association of which I am president by courtesy only. Now we propose to organize properly and become incorporated and all that, and I shall be expected to put up a large sum of money, which I am more than willing to do, but not if it is going to be used and squandered, without my sanction. Oh, there's a lot to be considered, and I fear it is getting to the point, where I must drop out of it, in which case I daresay I should have to fly by night, to avoid tar and feathers. The alternative would be to have a professional auditor come in and go over the whole thing, with an eye looking for dishonesty. And I fear the net result to me of such a procedure would be worse than the first proposition. So, I'm between the devil and the deep sea, and I have lost faith in my neighbors whom I have trusted for many years, and that is a blow that hurts."

"Indeed it must," Yvette said, impulsively. "Nothing stirs me up like ingratitude. And there is lots of it in the world. In our profession there is much jealousy and envy. And in some—many natures, they fester and become very dreadful. It is only recently that this sort of trouble has come near me, and it may clear away. But if not, I should certainly abandon my career, for a life full of discord and injustice would be unbearable."

"That's right," Madison said. "Sit up here by me, Yvette, but we must not refer to our injustices at luncheon."

"No, indeed. And after all, they're in the great minority, compared with our pleasures."

Yvette was in her room, and very much wanted to telephone to New York, and there was an extension instrument right on her boudoir table. But her message was decidedly confidential, and experience had taught her that a film star is of inordinate interest to most people, and her communications had so often been overheard, that she was wary. She concluded to ask somebody, either Craig or Wilkins, if he could arrange a clear wire for her.

In a gorgeous gown Yvette went down stairs, hoping to be ahead of the crowd at Sunday night supper, and able to accomplish her own really important errand. But the rooms were already well filled, and, quite evidently, many were waiting to see her, with the usual curiosity about a celebrity.

Craig met her at the foot of the staircase and was about to direct her steps, when Harley Madison came by, and said:

"Oh, here you are, Miss Verne, I've been waiting for you."

Craig always gave way to his uncle and was usually quite willing to do so, but this time he felt annoyed. Yvette was his find. If he hadn't met her at Amy Crosby's she would never have been here, and he resented, a little, his uncle's usurpation of his rights.

* * *

Yvette was charming. She had no hauteur, no indifference, to annoy them, she seemed to each one she met to be glad of the meeting and determined to make the most of it. She wished she could help Harley in his trouble with the village fathers, but of course she couldn't broach a subject like that to a strange man. But she bethought herself of approaching the wives of those outrageous men, and perhaps do a little good.

She began on Mrs. Job Hendricks.

"You're fortunate," she said, "to be the wife of one of the most important of the members of the committee. Mr. Madison has told me of Mr. Hendrick's generosity, and his willingness to give a splendid library. I can't help feeling that is the most worthy gift of all. Other things will come of themselves, but a library must be planned and selected by worthwhile minds, such as I feel sure you and your husband possess."

"Mr. Hendricks is a college man," was the proud response, "and I graduated from a young ladies' seminiary."

"Good!" cried Yvette, "so did I."

She had never been inside the institution named, but she was willing to put truth on the scaffold, if that would help matters along.

Madison getting the drift of the conversation, moved away a little to give Yvette her full chance. But the confab over, he hastened to her side and drew her away with him.

Unheeding the beseeching looks of certain would-be-favored guests, he led her directly and without pause to his own study, took her inside and shut the door.

"Do tell me," he cried, "what you were saying to that woman, before I die of curiosity and —fear!"

"Fear?" Yvette's lovely laugh rang out. "What are you afraid of?"

"Of what you said to her. Please tell me."

"Of course," she said, seeing he was in earnest. "I only gave her a fair-sized dose of flattery, and told her how noble her husband is.

"Saying nothing about me?"

"Not definitely. Of course, I had to tell her that you were the source of information as to her husband's nobility and generosity. Look here, Mr. Madison, I am not a silly young thing; I have learned, through experience, wisdom, tact, even diplomacy, and I want you to understand that I said nothing to Mrs. Hendricks that you would disapprove of."

"I don't believe you did, my dear, but of course you don't know what a delicate situation it is."

"Tell me, then, and I can help you more intelligently."

Yvette was sitting on the corner of a table, and Madison stood beside her.

"I wish you could help me—now—and always!"

His arm went round her and she did not draw away, he bent his head a little and then there came a sharp rap at the door.

HEARD S.O.S. OF TORPEDOED SHIP

Mansfield Collegian Tells of Ocean Trip on Freighter, London's 'Black-Out.'

the crew and the passengers, four of whom were women, two English and two Canadians.

The Cairnross made its way out into the Irish channel, going considerable distance off its regular course because it had been warned to look out for submarines, and this fact alone saved it from being in the same water with the Athenia, McKinley said.

"About 8:20 p. m. on Sunday night, Sept. 3, we received the first S. O. S. of the Athenia and learned that she was only 80 miles away and in desperate plight," the Mansfielder said. "But because we were an English ship we dared not go near her or even answer her call. The admiralty had issued orders to this effect in order not to subject additional men and vessels to an enemy sub. So that as we steamed away from the stricken ship, the Norwegian vessel which was about two hours nearer the Athenia, went to her rescue. Being a neutral ship, she she could do it with safety.

"The men passengers were told at once but we didn't tell the women until the next day. All of our lights were put out and port holes covered. All of the passengers except myself had friends on the Athenia and everyone was depressed. We received radio communications but dared not send any out. In fact we were forbidden to reveal our position until we neared Quebec City in the St. Lawrence river."

In London, McKinley saw anti-air craft guns mounted on the top of tall buildings and soldiers stationed there. When he arrived in Glasgow for a visit with a friend, the city was preparing to evacuate its school children. There were four school children in his friend's family, ranging from 6 to 17 years.

"One day," the Mansfielder said, "each child was equipped with a gas mask and food enough for one day, placed on trains, buses and cars, and taken to the country. And when their parents said goodbye to them, they didn't know whether it would be days, weeks, months or years before they would see them again.

"It seemed to me that everything that was near and dear to them had to be sacrificed for the war—family life, old traditional things. My friend and I watched military men cut down the old wrought iron gates of his school—gates that had been given as a memorial by some class many years ago. They stood for something to the children and their parents—but they were torn down so that balloon barrage equipment could be taken into the school yard."

The black-out of a big city is one of the most depressing things in the world, according to McKinley. Cars crawl by in darkness and the spirits of the population seems to suffer a black-out too. Traffic lights are covered with black, and only two slits, to form a cross, are cut in them so that the color of the stop and go lights could trickle through.

But these were the distressing phases of his trip. Although the Kenyon college student made the voyage on what he frankly termed "a shoe string," he met the warmest hospitality and was the guest of young Lord Kenyon at his 30-room country house in Shropshire; and visited the island of Sark, the only feudal state in the world, where he was a guest of its "queen," the Dame de Sark.

McKinley delivered to Lord Kenyon a 1939 yearbook of Kenyon college which he edited last year. The Englishman is a great grandson of the Lord Kenyon who gave the money which founded the Episcopal college at Gambier. The Mansfielder remained at the country estate as a guest.

His acquaintance with the Dame de Sark came through a mutual friend in Cleveland. The little island—four miles long and one mile wide—is still operated in feudal manner, with a tenth of all production paid to the Dame as feudal taxes. No cars are permitted in her little kingdom, and her home is a picture-book old English home, McKinley said. To her the king of England is still the Duke of Normandy. The island is one of the channel chain and is located between the islands of Guernsey and Jersey.

McKinley returns to Kenyon college next week.

BUCYRUS — Miss Katheryn Flocken, Bucyrus, county case supervisor of public assistance, who was one of two persons receiving scholarships given at Western Reserve university at Cleveland, has been given a year's leave of absence for her educational work.

2 MORE POLISH CITIES SEIZED, GERMANS CLAIM

ported to describe conditions of disorder and starvation at the former Polish capital.

They said civilians were eating dogs and cats and that the streets were filled "with would-be fugitives, unable to get out of the city." Thousands of refuges were reported camped on the outskirts. It was said that they had no escape because Germans had cut all roads. The last one led to Brestlitovsk to which the Germans reportedly laid siege yesterday.

It was announced that 24 Polish planes, mostly pursuit types, were destroyed and seven captured yesterday east of the Vistula river, and that airports at Luck and Brody, northeast of Lemberg, had been bombed.

A new press campaign against Great Britain, trade negotiations with neutral nations, and a further mobilization of war resources vied with reports from the eastern front for public attention.

Trade quarters here reported that new German-Russian economic discussions were intended to double the present trade credit of $80,000,000 between the two countries. The negotiations were reported under way at Moscow with the trade attache of the German embassy there representing this country.

Foreign Diplomats Flee to Rumania.

By EDWARD W. BEATTIE, JR.
United Press Staff Correspondent

POLISH-RUMANIAN FRONTIER — The vanguard of diplomatic refugees accredited to Poland crossed the border into Rumania today on the advice of the Polish government, as flying columns of German tanks and trucks plunged deep into southeast Poland.

British and French diplomats were the first to desert Zaleszczyki, the little frontier market town, within 25 miles of both the Rumanian and Russian borders, where Poland's government had made a stand after three hasty moves in 12 days.

Polish officials, including President Ignace Moscicki, were still at Zaleszczyki but they notified the foreign diplomats that the town no longer was safe and that their escape to Rumania might be cut off at any time.

Another peril was that the German flying columns, which already had been reported as close as 40 miles northwest, might make a surprise raid on the little provisional capital itself.

Under Rumania's refugee law announced last night, members of the Polish government, if they crossed into that country, would be compelled to take fixed residences there and refrain from political activity.

Polish officials pointed out to the diplomats that the Zaleszczyki road was connected with Rumania only by two iron bridges and that German flyers might bomb them at any moment, forcing the diplomats to swim the Dniester river to safety.

Escape northward from Zaleszczyki would be most hazardous because raid by German flying columns and bombing planes had cut off most of the roads. The Germans were believed driving toward Tarnapol, near the Russian border, 100 miles to the north, in an effort to cut off the whole Polish Ukraine from the rest of the country.

Sets Up Rules.

(An official communique at Bucharest said that in view of the situation on the Polish border, and in order to fulfill Rumania's neutrality obligations, the following restrictions had been placed on the frontier. (1) wounded children arriving there would be treated in accordance with the laws of humanity; (2) foreign troops and other fighting units crossing the border would be disarmed and interned until the end of hostilities; (3) refugees who held political positions in Poland will be ordered to remain in certain towns and must abstain from political activities while there; (4) the entrance of private persons into Rumania, especially from the Galician region—southern Poland, where the percentage of Jews is high—is strictly forbidden.

German motorized columns were reported to have advanced far east of Lemberg on the north and south in a series of lightning raids in the Carpathian foothills.

The motorized units appeared to be operating from a base in the Drohatyzc-Stryki area, 100 miles northwest of here and 40 miles south of Lemberg, and it was doubted that they were yet in contact with the main body of the German southern army, which was based somewhere near Przemysl, 60 miles west of Lemberg. Until the main army advanced, the motorized thrusts would consist mostly of forays, extending the region of destruction, after which the Germans would return to their base.

A Farmer's Diary

Rabbits Are Brave.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I WALKED out across the pasture with my little son to shut up the chickens for the night. My hand was upon his dark tanned shoulder and I observed the swarthiness of his sunbrowned sides. He merged into the drab and darkening landscape like a native Indian. A cottontail jumped up beside our path. We watched him disappear into the dusky grass, his white tail making a zigzag line of flight. "Don't rabbits ever do more than run away to save their lives?" inquired the boy. "Mother turkey blows when I come too near, and a mother hen will flop you, and dogs will fight—hard. Even bees and hornets will follow me and sting, terrible. Is bunny such a coward?"

"No," I replied, "but his safest bet is in his swift legs in time of danger. There are times though—I remember a year ago last June, at the other farm, I heard a thump, thump, thump along a thicket. I stopped to listen, and it came again—a hard thump, thump upon the ground, emphatic and meaningful."

"What's meaningful?"

"It sounded as though something was in danger. I looked and saw the neighbor's yellow cat, crouched in the grass with her tail moving back and forth as if to spring. Then, like a flash, a big mother bunny jumped right at her, and struck the cat's arched back with her sharp hind claws, then came back to the place she had started from. The cat crouched again and I heard four heavy thumps from the rabbit's warning forepaws. Then the rabbit jumped again and this time struck the cat upon the head so that she dodged sidewise and crept off into the grass. I had not known it was a mother bunny, but then I saw five little ones huddled down in a furry nest. They were about two weeks old, and even one would have made a fine meal for their enemy, the cat. I waited quite a while, though, but pussy did not come back."

"I guess a rabbit isn't so timid as I thought," remarked the little boy. "Would it thump its front feet on the ground if I came near, and would it jump and scratch at me?" And he came very close as the darker evening shadows gathered.

"Yes," I said, "they will show fight against any enemy that threatens their home or family, until they realize the odds are entirely too great. Then they will jump and run with all the speed they have. Rabbits aren't cowards. They rear their young ones in the fact of danger."

The Baltimore Oriole is the only bird that has a latticed window in its nest and a door that closes when the mother enters. The baggy, flexible nest usually hangs from a drooping branch of a high tree.

In spite of losses sustained as a result of sudden rainstorms early in the summer, the pheasant "crop" at the Urbana and Wellington Game Farms this year was very good, according to reports which have been made to Conservation Commissioner Don Waters. The Game Management Bureau has just completed the distribution of 17,500 young birds from the farms, with a reasonable number retained for brood stock.

Catfish are reported striking well at Indian Lake. Unusually good fishing is reported on the Lake Erie reefs north of the Marblehead peninsula. Not only are catches large, but big fish ranging up to seven and eight pounds are being hooked frequently. Black bass are beginning to strike in the lake and within several weeks the fall bass fishing should be in full swing.

Tony Galento Massacres Nova In Fight In Which He Upsets Fistic Dope.

By JACK CUDDY

PHILADELPHIA —(U.P.)— They were still singing "Tonyboy; Tonyboy" at his headquarters in the Walton hotel this morning when Tony Galento headed for Orange, N. J., to begin prolonged training behind his tavern bar for another crack at the world heavyweight championship next June.

There was revelry at the Walton because of Tony's victory last night in Municipal stadium, but all was quiet on the Hahnemann hospital front where young Lou Nova, the guy Tony massacred, had his face stitched together again.

* * *

"Two Ton" Tony earned another shot at puglisim's coveted crown by upsetting all the laws of nature, all preachments of boxing experts and all opinions of betting men by registering a technical knockout over the now slightly tarnished "golden boy" from the Golden Gate in the 14th round.

Galento, 29, again became the world's No. 1 challenger and won the right to meet the winner of Wednesday night's Louis-Pastor title tilt at Detroit by triumphing with ease over 24-year-old Nova in one of the most bloody brawls ever staged anywhere.

The crowd and the gate were disappointing to promoters Mike Jacobs and Herman Taylor, who estimated that the gross gate was approximately $69,000 and that the cash customers numbered about 19,000. But the battle itself surpassed expectations. Those who went saw ancient and supposedly dissipated Galento a 4-1 underdog in the betting batter youthful, clean-living Nova into such a helpless hulk that Referee George Blake halted the fight at 2:44 minutes of the 14th.

And this wasn't soon enough for hundreds of fans who had been shouting from the fifth round on, "stop that fight! stop that fight!"

* * *

They were shouting because Galento gashed Lou's right brow in the third round with his smashing left hooks—gashed his left brow and mouth in the fourth—floored him four times and caused him to slip to the canvass two more times. Handsome Lou was a blood-smeared, punching bag. And after Tony suffered cuts under his lower lip and under his chin, the encounter reached the ultimate in gore.

* * *

Nova was a worse mess when Referee Blake lifted Galento's hand, than Tony was that night last June when Champion Louis knocked him out in the fourth round. It was all Tony's battle from the opening gong. He forced the fighting throughout and landed the most damaging blows, winning every round except the 10th on the United Press score sheet.

BATTLE IN FINALS

GLENVIEW, Ill. —(U.P.)— The only thing they have in common is a magic putter so it'll be a scramble on the greens today when Ray Billows of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., battles Marvin (Bud) Ward of Spokane, Wash., in the 36-hole finals of the U. S. Amateur Golf championship at the North Shore Country club.

IN THE RUHL BOOK

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sports Editor.

FINAL unofficial Ohio State league averages released today by the Howe bureau of Chicago proved that Hank Edwards, Mansfield's right fielder, was a fair sort of a ball player.

In addition to leading the league at the plate with a .395 average, Edwards led the circuit in the number of games played 130; times at bat, 529; runs, 135; hits, 209; total bases, 332; two-base hits, 41; home runs, 18; stolen bases, 37, and tied Fred Wilber of Findlay for the lead in triples, 14.

EDWARDS

The only department in which Edwards had to take a back seat was in runs batted in, and the Brave finished second to Wilber in this division with 129.

These figures definitely establish Edwards as the "player of the year" in the Ohio State league.

Edwards established new league marks in games played, times at bat, hits, runs and total bases. His 14 triples also gave him a share of this record.

* * *

THE Norwalk nugget nudger provided five of at least 14 records established in the Class D circuit this season.

Pitcher Leon Maloney was the only other Mansfield players to hang up a new individual mark, but the Braves, as a team, figured in the manufacture of two records.

MALONEY

The little Mansfield right hander appeared in 37 games to scatter the old standard of 36, set by Steve Vargo of Fostoria in 1936.

Team records broken by the Braves were erected in the most hits and most putouts departments, the latter mark being shared with Tiffin.

Findlay registered a new mark in the number of runs scored and Lima fashioned a modern record in the league in assists.

The only other individual marks shattered were in the number of pitching victories, set at 21 by Barney Fletcher of Findlay, and most strikeouts and walks, Lefty Berger of Fostoria being the record-breaker in each instance with 227 and 130, respectively.

While the majority of these records were due almost entirely to the fact that a greater number of games were played in the league this year, a fair share was the result of superior performances.

Edwards' .395 Mark Gives Him Bat Title

Whippets Lift Lid With 7-0 Triumph

SHELBY—Coach Bill Query's Shelby high school gridmen whipped Norwalk, 7 to 0, in their opening game here last night to mark up their 11th game without a defeat.

The Bordertown athletes scored their lone touchdown in the third period from the kickoff, which Yosick ran back to Norwalk's 40. A 15-yard pass and several nice running gains by Yosick and Laubie took the ball to the eight, the point from where Laubie threw to Lehman for the score. Lehman converted the extra point.

* * *

The only other time Shelby threatened seriously was in the second period when it drove 66 yards to the visitors' 10. A fumble halted the drive.

* * *

Norwalk reached the Shelby 24 in the first period, but fumbled. The half ended with Norwalk in possession of the oval on the Shelby 10. Both teams registered nine first downs.

Ganni, Fry Lead Crestline to Win.

CRESTLINE—Phil Ganni tallied three touchdowns to lead Crestline high school to a 38 to 6 victory over Sandusky St. Mary's in the opening game of the season for both clubs here last night.

Scoring in every period, Crestline held a 13 to 0 advantage at the half. Ganni tallied the first score on a 35-yard punt in the opening period, and also produced the second touchdown in the next quarter.

In the third period, Ganni tallied his third touchdown on a 61-yard sweep. Frye scored the other two Crestline touchdowns. Smith tallied for Sandusky on a pass in the third period.

Galion High Romps Over Mt. Gilead.

GALION—High school football was ushered in at Galion last night in a big way, the Galion high school Orangemen steam rolling over Mt. Gilead under the Heise park lights by a score of 42 to 6.

In the first quarter, Durtschi ran across to score for Galion, and in the same quarter he scored on a kick off. He made another touchdown in the second quarter, and a safety added two points. Dewalt also scored a touchdown for Galion in this quarter. In the third quarter, Crim made a touchdown, and Dewalt scored in the final quarter.

Logan intercepted Secrest's pass to score Mt. Gilead touchdown.

Ashland Triumphs At Willard, 14 to 0.

WILLARD—The Ashland high gridders inaugurated their season with a 14 to 0 victory over Willard here last night. After battling without a score in the first half, the A's tallied twice in the final periods.

Pugsili's pass to Mumaw gave the A's their first score in the third frame. He also bucked over the final touchdown after Howell returned an interception to the one.

Butler Beaten By Larue, 19-0

Bulldogs Wilt In Second Half on Home Field.

BUTLER—Coach Bob Burgett's Butler high grid machine dropped a 19 to 0 verdict to LaRue in the season's opener here yesterday.

The Bulldogs battled the heavier LaRue team to a standstill in the opening half, but wilted after the intermission.

LaRue tallied one touchdown in the third period and added the other two late in the final stanza. LaRue chalked up 10 first downs to Butler's four.

Butler's main weakness were at the tackle positions where LaRue continually chalked up large gains. The Bulldogs were on the defense most of the time and never threatened.

Cigars Close With Victory

Hang Up 31st Win by Halting Marysville, 11 to 5.

The Musille Cigars closed their softball season with 31 victories against six defeats last night when they defeated Nestle's Dairys of Marysville, 11 to 5, in Marysville.

Yielding only six hits and three walks, Dale McKinley struck out 16 as he set the hosts down without trouble. The Cigars tallied three times in the third and four times in the fifth to take a lead that was never threatened.

Miles and Woerth led the Mansfield attack. The former collected two triples and a home run, and the latter got three singles and a triple.

Rams Bow In Inaugural, But Prove They're Tough

1,200 See Madison Out-Battle Heavier Wooster Club In 25 to 13 Defeat.

By CHARLES MARTIN

ONE THING can be said about the 1939 football edition at Madison high school—it will cause rivals plenty of worry before the season closes.

That was proved to the satisfaction of approximately 1,200 spectators at Madison field last night when the Rams absorbed a 25 to 13 trimming from the Wooster high eleven under the floodlights in the opening game of the season.

Madison spotted the heavier Class A club with a 13 to 0 advantage in the opening half, but came back with a rush after the intermission with threats that seriously threatened the invaders' advantage.

The Rams, on one pass play, sent Bob Matthes over on a 70-yard jaunt in the early minutes of the third period to cut Wooster's margin to a 13 to 7 count, but the heavier visitors, coupled with the heat, proved too big an obstacle for Madison and Wooster penetrated pay dirt twice in the final frame to ice the game.

Dave Weimer, who performed spectacular at his fullback position, provided Madison with a scoring opportunity late in the second period when he blocked and recovered one of Vernon Wood's punts on the Wooster 18.

* * *

With only a minute remaining in the half, Madison tried desperately to score, but was pushed back to the Wooster 23 as the gun sounded.

After Wooster piled up a 25 to 7 lead in the fourth period, the Rams still showed plenty of fight by taking the next kickoff and returning it for a score.

Capt. Bill Heichel caught the ball on the Madison 35 and after advancing to the 40 tossed a lateral to Doug DeNero, who, behind some nifty blocking, crossed over standing up. Heichel's drop kick for the point was low.

There was some dispute on the sidelines as to whether Wooster should have scored its last touchdown. Capt. Stoneburner intercepted a DeNero pass on the Wooster 33. Madison players bottled him up and he tossed a lateral to Heckman to race over for the score. The dispute was on the lateral, which, from the sidelines looked like a forward.

Madison, although it collected only five first downs to Wooster's 15, stopped a number of threats when it looked like the Wooster steamroller couldn't be halted. Coach Al Fendrick's proteges also were in better physical condition for the game.

Bill Weimer added Madison only extra point on his drop kick after the initial touchdown.

Woods proved to be the principal ground gainer for Coach Ed Winsper's aggregation. Several times he slashed through the Madison line on long jaunts. DeNero caused the Wooster team considerable trouble with his neat runs and bullet-like passes.

1,500 See Bucyrus Lose to Marion.

BUCYRUS — Approximately 1,500 football fans witnessed the opening game played last night on one of the hottest days of the year, after school had been dismissed in the afternoon due to the excessive heat.

Bucyrus was defeated by Marion St. Mary's, 14 to 12. Both teams had scored in the second quarter, ending the quarter 6 to 7 in favor of Marion. Marion made another touch down and N. Cafagno was successful with a place-kick making the score 14 to 6 at the end of the third quarter. Bucyrus scored another touchdown in the last quarter but Gebhardt was unsuccessful with his kick. Adams, Bucyrus left half, scored both Bucyrus touchdowns. Marion touchdowns were made by T. Schuler and N. Cafagno.

Technicolor Fantasy.

EVERYONE from eight to 80 is familiar with L. Frank Baum's fantasy, "The Wizard of Oz," which has been made into a technicolor picture and which opened an engagement at the Ohio today. The story is that of a young girl, caught in a Kansas cyclone, who takes a fantastical journey into the Land of Oz to see the powerful Wizard. She is accompanied by her dog Toto; by the Coward Lion who wants the Wizard to give him courage; by the Tin Woodman, who wants a heart, and by the Scarecrow, who asks the Wizard for a brain. Metro-Goldwyn has filmed the story on an elaborate scale and with a riot of gorgeous colors.

Has Sympathetic Role.

In an exciting story of prison camp cruelties, escapes through swampy jungles and the hazardous life of an oil well shooter, Edward G. Robinson will be seen at the Madison in a four-day showing of "Blackmail." Beautiful Ruth Hussey has a sympathetic role as his wife, with little Bobs Watson as their son. For this picture Robinson forsakes his gangster roles and becomes a man persecuted by the law, forced into his first crime by persecution, and emerging victorious only after an actual test by fire.

Colbert and Stewart.

Claudette Colbert plays a daffy poetess and James Stewart a private detective hired to keep a playboy out of trouble in "It's a Wonderful World." The comedy takes a serious turn when the playboy is murdered and the detective becomes involved. Guy Kibbee plays Cap Streeter who invariably suspects the wrong man. Others in the cast are Nat Pendleton, Edgar Kennedy and others. "The Duke of West Point," which is also on the Ritz bill for the first three days of the week, has Louis Hayward, Tom Brown and Joan Fontaine.

Revive Air Thriller.

The revival of "The Lost Squadron" brings a memorable cast to the Park for the first half of the week, starting Sunday. The picture was one of the air thrillers and a glance at the players gives some idea of its importance when it was made—Richard Dix, Joel McCrea, Mary Astor, Dorothy Jordan, Robert Armstrong, Hugh Herbert and Eric Von Stroheim. The stunt fliers were the two greatest in picture history—Dick Grace and Art Gobel. "She Married a Cop" has Phil Regan and Jean Parker.

"Dodge City."

The epic of the first transcontinental railroad which joined the east and west, is told in "Dodge City" in which Errol Flynn, Olivia deHavilland, Victor Jory, Alan Hale, Raymond Hatton and Bruce Cabot play the major roles. For excitement and action few pictures in recent years have equalled it, and it gives Flynn his best heman role. On the same bill at the Majestic tomorrow will be "They Asked for It" with William Lundigan and Joy Hodges. It's the story of a small town newspaper against gangsterism.

These payments are calculated at Household's new reduced rates of 2% monthly on balances up to $300 and 5% yearly on balances over $300 to $600. These rates are less than legal maximum, and are the same to everyone—one price to all. Only borrowers sign—no endorsers on any loan. No credit inquiries of friends or relatives.

HONEST, ZERO — I FEEL GRAND ALL OVER THIS MORNIN' — MY WIM-WAMS IS ALL GONE AWAY AN' EVERY-THING SEEMS FINE —
I WAS SCARED TO SHOW DR GOOD THAT LITTLE OLD BOOK MRS. SPRUCE GAVE ME — SHE SAID IT WASN'T WORTH NOTHIN' — BUT THE POSTMASTER SAID SOME OLD BOOKS ARE WORTH A LOTTA MONEY —
'COURSE, IT'S TERRIBLE OLD AN' DUSTY — BUT THE STORIES IN IT ARE GRAND — I THOUGHT MAYBE I COULD SELL THE BOOK AN' GET SOME MONEY TO HELP MRS. SPRUCE —
YESTERDAY, I SHOWED THE BOOK TO DR. GOOD — AN' HE SAID IT MIGHT BE WORTH SOMETHIN' — HE JUST SAID IT MIGHT BE WORTH SOMETHIN' AN' HE IS GONNA WRITE TO PEOPLE WHO BUY OLD BOOKS AN' FIND OUT FOR SURE
DARRELL McCLURE
ARE YOU SERIOUS, DOCTOR? DO YOU REALLY BE-LIEVE THAT LITTLE OLD BOOK CAN HAVE ANY VALUE? YOU CAN BUY A COMPLETE SET OF EDGAR ALLAN POE'S WORKS IN ANY BOOKSHOP FOR A FEW DOLLARS —
THAT ALSO APPLIES TO SHAKESPEARE — BUT EVEN A SINGLE PAGE FROM A FIRST EDITION OF SHAKESPEARE WOULD BE WORTH A FORTUNE — I KNOW SOME OF POE'S EARLY EDITIONS ARE VALUABLE
THE COPY OF POE'S TALES ANNIE SHOWED ME IS UNDATED — BUT IT IS OBVIOUSLY EXTREMELY OLD
IT WAS IN OUR FAMILY BEFORE I WAS BORN
I CONFESS THERE IS ONLY A SLIM CHANCE THAT IT IS A RARE EDITION — I HAVE SENT A DETAILED DESCRIPTION OF THE BOOK TO THREE DEALERS — IF IT HAS ANY VALUE — WELL — WE SHALL SEE —!
DARRELL McCLURE
REMEMBER, ANNIE — DR. GOOD SAID THERE WAS MERELY A SLIM CHANCE THE EXPERTS WOULD CONSIDER YOUR LITTLE BOOK TO BE OF ANY VALUE —
WELL, A SLIM CHANCE IS BETTER'N NO CHANCE AT ALL — DR. GOOD IS AWFUL SMART — HE HAS ALL KINDS OF BOOKS IN HIS OFFICE —
— AN' I'LL BETCHA HE THINKS THE BOOK IS WORTH SOMETHIN' OR HE WOULDN'T BE WRITIN' TO 'TELL EXPERTS ABOUT IT — ANYHOW, IT DON'T DO NO HARM TO KEEP ON WISHIN' HE KIN SELL IT FOR SOME MONEY —
DARRELL McCLURE
YOU'RE A NATURAL-BORN OPTIMIST, HONEY — AFTER ALL, THERE IS NO USE PRETENDING I AM NOT CHERISH-ING ANY HOPE — IN SPITE OF ALL LOGIC AND COMMON SENSE — I KEEP HOPING IT MIGHT BE WHAT WE HOPE IT IS!

SEE THAT DUST WAY DOWN NEAR THE BEND? MAYBE DR. GOOD IS COMING
I'M AFRAID NOT — THAT'S TOO BIG A CLOUD OF DUST FOR THE DOCTOR'S OLD HORSE AND BUGGY TO RAISE MAYBE THE DOCTOR IS IN A HURRY — YOU KNOW REX, THE HORSE, HAS TERRIBLE BIG FEET — AN' —
I THINK YOU'RE RIGHT — IT LOOKS LIKE A SINGLE RIG —
CONFOUND THE LUCK! IT'S JUST AL JORDAN — I MIGHT JUST AS WELL FINISH THAT JOB FOR JOHNSON — HE SAID TO RUSH IT
DARRELL McCLURE
HONEST, I THINK YOU'RE GRAND — EVER SINCE I TOLD YOU THAT MAY-BE DR GOOD WOULD COME ALONG BRINGIN' GOOD NEWS TO MRS. SPRUCE — YOU KEEP HELPIN' ME TO WATCH FOR HIM — JUST LIKE THE GOOD NEWS WAS FOR YOU —
DR. GOOD IS COMIN'!! NOW WE'LL FIND OUT IF THE LITTLE BOOK WE WANNA SELL IS WORTH ANY MONEY OR NOT
NO — I HAVEN'T HAD ANY ANSWERS YET FROM THE BOOK-BUYERS — DON'T EXPECT ANY BEFORE EARLY NEXT WEEK
"THEN, IT'S MORE THAN LIKELY OURS IS JUST ONE OF A THOUSAND COPIES — UNLESS THE BOOK IS A RARE COPY WE'VE JUST WASTED OUR STAMPS —
SEE! I THOUGHT MAYBE IT WAS ONE OF THE OLD BOOKS THEY'D PAY LOTSA MONEY FOR — AN' THEN MRS. SPRUCE COULD GO AN' LIVE WITH HER SISTER — AN' —
I WAS AFRAID —
HERE — HERE — CHIN UP — AFTER ALL — THERE IS ALWAYS A CHANCE — THE BOOK MAY BE VALUABLE —
DARRELL McCLURE
NOW, DON'T GET DISCOURAGED, YOUNGSTER — UNLESS DR GOOD THOUGHT THERE WAS A CHANCE OF SELLING THAT LITTLE OLD BOOK — HE WOULDN'T WASTE TIME WRITING TO BOOK-BUYERS —
JUST WAIT UNTIL HE GETS AN AN-SWER TO HIS LETTERS — I KNOW THE WAITING IS HARD — BUT I NOTICE WE SPEND MOST ALL OUR TIME WAITING FOR SOMETHING —
WE GIT UP IN THE MORNING — WAIT FOR BREAK-FAST — AND AFTER BREAKFAST WE START WAITING FOR DINNER — IN WINTER WE WAIT FOR SPRING — IF IT AIN'T WAITING FOR ONE THING — IT'S ANOTHER —
DARRELL McCLURE
WHEN I WAS YOUR AGE — I WAS AL-WAYS WAITING FOR SOMETHING — CHRISTMAS — FOURTH OF JULY — MY BIRTHDAY — VACATION OR A CIRCUS — AND I NOTICE ONE THING — IF YOU JUST KEEP ON WAITING LONG ENOUGH — THE THING YOU'RE WAITING FOR FINALLY TROTS ALONG!
